Tax Publicity Dies as Senate Votes to Void Pink Slip Law

Overwhelming Victory, 53 to 16, Continues Gag on Incomes.

One Amendment In Way of Accord

Whether State Officers Will Get Data Is Up to Conferees.

By an overwhelming chorus of 53 to 16, the Senate yesterday voted to repeal the pink slip income tax publicity features of the present law, assuring continued secrecy on income tax records.

The House previously had approved the repealer by a vote of 302 to 98. The bill now goes to conference.

Swift action of the Senate effectively blocks the publication of gross income, net income, deductibles and tax totals listed on a pink slip and filed with the Treasury by everybody who made income-tax returns for 1934.

Although these slips have been in the hands of the Treasury since March 15, they have never been offered for public inspection, and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had assured congressional leaders they would not have been before October.

Vote Comes Suddenly.

The vote came with unexpected suddenness, after the Senate by a voice ballot voted to sustain a point of order raised against a $275,000,000 income tax amendment proposed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

In the final vote for repeal, 10 Republicans joined with 43 Democrats to abolish the pink-slip law, while 10 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 Progressive voted "no."

Only a lone Senate amendment stands in the way of a conference agreement between the two Houses on the measure.

That change, proposed by Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado, would make tax data available to State and local officials charged with responsibility for assessment and collection of taxes. The Costigan amendment makes it a misdemeanor for such officials to disclose this information.

An amendment by Senator La Follette, throwing open tax records to full publicity, was voted down Tuesday, 51 to 25, paving the way for yesterdays' action. La Follette immediately offered another amendment, raising the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, increasing the surtax maximum from 59 to 71 per cent, and lowering income tax exemptions. La Follette said it would raise $275,000,000.

Point of Order Sustained.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, raised a point of order against the amendment, holding it was contrary to the Constitution for revenue legislation to originate in the Senate. Vice President Garner declined to rule on the point, and the question was put to the Senate. The point of order was sustained without a record vote.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, who had fought with La Follette for wider publicity and withheld an amendment of his own to raise $325,000,000 more in revenues through excess profits taxes, refused to serve on the conference committee on the measure when appointed by Garner.

He stated he was "not in sympathy" with the bill. The Vice

Mandate Stay In Comics Suit

U.S. Supreme Court Action in Force Until April 4 in Post-Times Case.

Chief Justice Hughes yesterday granted a stay of mandate until April 4 in The Washington Post-Washington Times Co. suit involving the exclusive publication rights to four comic strips and two other features syndicated by the Tribune Co. of Chicago.

The stay remains in force until April 4, providing a petition for a writ of certiorari to review the recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District in favor of The Post is filed with the Supreme Court of the United States on or before that date, by the Washington Times Co. If such a petition is filed, the stay of mandate will be continued until the court acts on the petition.

This means that both The Post and The Herald will continue to publish "The Gumps," "Dick Tracy," "Gasoline Alley," and "Winnie Winkle" at least until April 4.

If, by that date, the Times company has filed with the Supreme Court its petition for a writ of certiorari to review the case, The Post will then file arguments against the granting of such a writ. And the court, within a short period of time, will render its decision on whether a review is to be granted.

London, March 28.—Ten American women were presented to King George and Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace tonight in the season's first court.

A colorful, resplendent affair, the court provided an informal opening for King George's silver jubilee celebration.

The Americans, whose double curtsy before Britain's rulers marked the high spot of their social year, were among 200 debutantes and matrons who passed before their majesties seated on twin golden thrones and received royal smiles and nods in acknowledgment.

A second court will be held tomorrow night, at which nine other American matrons and debutantes will be presented.

In addition to Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, who attended as an invited guest, the American women presented tonight were:

Mrs. Jessie Isador Straus, wife of the United States Ambassador to France; Miss Carolyn Nash, of Cartersville, Va.; Mrs. Medley G. B. Whelpley, of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Mary Pye Hutcheson, of Houston, Tex.; Miss Jean Watts, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, of Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Miss Jean Millet, of New York City; Miss Anne Richardson, of Mississippi; Miss Stellita Stapleton, of Washington, and Mrs. James Somerville, jr., wife of the American assistant commercial attache in London.

Four Walkouts Are Threatened By Million Men

Coal, Auto, Rubber, Textile Industries Seethe in Labor Crisis.

By Felix Bruner.

The most serious strike threats since the beginning of the New Deal were facing the country yesterday.

In spite of NRA intervention in the dispute between bituminous miners and operators, it was agreed that little or no progress had been made toward preventing a walkout Monday of 350,000 men, tying up the entire industry.

Threats of strikes also were active in the automobile, rubber and textile industries. Altogether the four industries in which labor trouble is threatened employ more than 1,000,000 men.

For more than two hours yesterday a joint committee of miners and operators met with the National Industrial Recovery Board, presided over by Donald R. Richberg. At the conclusion of the conference, Richberg said there was a pronounced difference of opinion between the two groups, which have been meeting since February 18. He added that little progress had been made in composing these differences.

Another Parley Set Today.

Immediately after the joint conference the Recovery Board went into executive session to decide what, if anything, could be done. The joint committee was asked to return for another meeting with the board this afternoon.

Early last night the Recovery Board announced appointment of a sub-committee to confer with the operators and miners through the night and before the meeting today. The sub-committee is composed of

Roosevelt, Off Coast of Cuba, Drops Fish Line and All Care

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 28.—Off the northern coast of Cuba, President Roosevelt dropped a line today for the first fishing of his Southern waters vacation cruise.

The yacht Nourmahal anchored at Mayo Lobos for the fishing try and during the afternoon James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, joined the party.

"Jimmy" flew from San Juan, Puerto Rico, on the regular Pan-American Airways plane en route to Miami. The plane alighted at 2:10 p. m. (E. S. T.).

While the President fished in the bright sunshine, the following report was sent to Marvin M. McIntyre, presidential secretary, established at the Miami Biltmore Hotel.

"Jimmy arrived all well and plane landed and took off without difficulty. We are spending the day having good fishing off Lobos and tonight will proceed to Great Inagua Island."

Capt. Wilson Brown, naval aid to the President, sent the report. Word was awaited tonight of what luck the President had in his first fishing.

Otherwise it appeared to be a regular vacation day for Mr. Roosevelt. Miami headquarters reported nothing further and eveything appeared quiet, with prospects for several more days of outdoor life for the President.

The destroyer Farragut trailed the Nourmahal and picked up young Roosevelt when he left the plane.

As usual on such trips, Mr. Roosevelt left the Nourmahal in a small boat to do his fishing. There is a prospect Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, may go down tomorrow along the Florida keys, where 1,200 veterans are engaged in rehabilitation work under Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Mayo Lobos, where the President fished today, is in British waters.

Action Sped On Relief Bill; Silver Is Out

Conferees Void Thomas Rider, Reach Final Agreement.

Measure to House Today; Threat of Filibuster in Senate Fades.

By Robert C. Albright.

After a gruelling, all-day session, Senate and House conferees last night arrived at complete agreement on the President's $4,800,000,000 work-relief bill and bundled it on its way toward final passage.

Working at high speed in a race with rapidly vanishing relief funds, the conference committee, with one broad stroke, eliminated the Thomas silver-inflation amendment, which would have forced the Treasury to issue silver currency against bullion at a peak $1.29-an-ounce value.

Another important change makes all administrative and other officers having general supervision over the works program and all new State and regional administrators subject to presidential appointment, with Senate confirmation.

The bill will be called up immediately in the House today, under a special consent agreement enabling House conferees to file their report last night. Unless unexpected opposition develops in the Senate, it is entirely possible the history-making measure may be placed on the President's doorstep this week.

Filibuster May Fade.

Collapse of a Senate silver filibuster against the report appeared imminent last night after Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, inflationist leader, announced he would speak for only 20 minutes against approval.

Despite outright rejection of his silver amendment by the conferees, Thomas said he would not impede approval of the report.

"I have accomplished my purpose in crystallizing the silver issue before the public," the Oklahoman said.

He plans to concentrate efforts now on the Senate Agriculture Committee, where a silver monetization bill is still pending. If he fails to persuade the committee to make a report, Thomas said, he will offer a silver rider to the bonus, banking and other bills, as they come up.

The only other strong possibility of opposition when the conference report comes back to the Senate lies in changes made by conferees in the amendment requiring Senate confirmation of high-salaried employes and in the Russell prevailing wage "compromise."

Debate Possible.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, originally proposed that all persons employed under the works program at $5,000 a year or more salary, be appointed by the President, with Senate confirmation. When this was approved by the Senate, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, served notice that elimination of this requirement by conferees would precipitate another prolonged controversy in the Senate.

Conferees struck out the $5,000 salary requirement, and this may cause some debate.

The conference change in the Russell "compromise" calls for determination, in advance, of what is the prevailing wage in any given locality before contracts are signed on permanent public building projects. Provisions of the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage law will apply.

It was around the prevailing wage issue in the bill that Senate debate

Auto Liability For District Passes House

Buffeted About 'Hill' for Several Years, New Law Assured.

Immediate Insurance for Taxis Defeated After Hot Debate.

The bill establishing financial responsibility for everyone of the 150,000 motor vehicle operators in the District, which has been buffeted about Capitol Hill several years, was assured of becoming a law yesterday when the House adopted it with an amendment.

Adoption came after a three-hour battle during which three members of the House District Committee sought to attach an amendment which would have made immediate insurance by taxicab operators compulsory. The amendment was rejected by a narrow margin of votes, but the issue is expected to arise again this session in the form of a separate bill now before the committee.

Sponsors of the measure predict that it will reduce the number of traffic accidents in the District. Its provisions apply equally to operators of private, commercial or taxi vehicles.

Provision Are Listed.

The bill provides that an operator's driving permit and registration certificate shall be suspended by the District Commissioners in any one of the following three instances:

Conviction or forfeiture of bond or collateral for drving while drunk.

Conviction or forfeiture of bond or collateral for leaving the scene of an accident in which personal injury occurs without making identity known.

Failure to satisfy a judgment for damages arising from an accident.

Such suspension would remain in effect until the operator thereafter obtains a liability insurance policy, takes out a bond, either with a surety company or an unencumbered real estate, or deposits $11,000 with the clerk of the District Supreme Court.

The amendment adopted by the House eliminated a provision which would have facilitated Washingtonians in obtaining judgments against nonresidents who injured their person or property in traffic accidents in the District.

Warns of Harassment.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, stocky outspoken new member of the House District Committee, put through the amendment by warning the members that their constituents would be harassed by Washingtonians.

Vainly did Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, point out that the constituents would be amply protected by a provision that the Washington plaintiff would have to deposit a bond covering all possible costs until the litigation was settled.

The section, which was deleted by a vote of 38 to 31, would have enabled District residents to obtain service on nonresidents by leaving a copy of the process and a $2 fee with the director of traffic in the District.

The battle centered, however, about the taxicab amendment, which was offered by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and supported actively by Nichols and Representative Randolph Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, all members of the House District Committee.

Although there were two preceding roll calls and considerable debate, the taxi amendment sponsors did not take advantage of an op-

Rep. Cannon Defends Blanton On Charge of Police Meddling

Texan Goes Before House With Threat to Expose 'Plot' Against Him; 3,906 Tickets Fixed by Traffic Bureau Since July.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, yesterday told the House he would expose for delectation of members "an insight into one of the most damnable plots ever entered into by these five newspapers in Washington" against him.

The Texan took the floor for a moment following a brief speech by Representative Clarence W. Cannon, of Missouri, chairman of the House District Appropriations subcommittee of which Blanton is a forceful member.

Speeches of both were aimed at the disclosures before the House District crime investigating committee involving Blanton. Blanton has threatened to make a lengthy speech before the House and to "revise and extend" his remarks in the Congressional Record. Blanton, a few years ago escaped expulsion from the House by a few votes because of matter he inserted in the Congressional Record under leave to "revise and extend" his remarks.

He then pleaded he had not known the contents of the matter he inserted in the Record and asked the House not to deprive his family of a means of livelihood by expelling him.

The crime committee inquiry developed the fact that Blanton, in a so-called "gentlemen's agreement," had sought to force the retirement of Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, assistant superintendent of police, to make room for the promotion of Inspector Albert J. Headley.

The Cannon and Blanton speeches came at the end of a day in the course of which the crime committee had received from Inspector B. A. Lamb, chief of the Traffic Bureau, figures showing the Traffic Bureau now has pending 5,000 warrants against motorists which have not been served.

Between July 1 and the end of February, Inspector Lamb reported, 3,906 traffic violation tickets had been "fixed" by the Traffic Bureau, and 521 had been "fixed" by the Corporation Counsel's office since November 5.

Whose tickets had been fixed was not shown by the report. Neither did the report show whether the beneficiaries of the "fixing" had high or low tag numbers. To gather that information from the records would require a month of work by many clerks, Inspector Lamb said. The committee ex-

Neutrality Bills Ready Today; Cut War Travel, Trade, Loans

Senate Group to Survey Tentative Drafts of the Legislature.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Tentative drafts of several bills restricting foreign travel, trade and loans in the event of the outbreak of war abroad will be laid before the Senate Munitions Committee today by Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of that group, he announced yesterday.

Senator Nye said the bills represented his ideas of what should be done in two or three major aspects to make invulnerable this country's neutrality in case warfare on a large scale broke out in Europe or elsewhere. Until the committee has had a chance to examine the proposals they will not be made public, Chairman Nye asserted.

It is understood that the Nye proposals would either direct or authorize the President to forbid passports to Americans wishing to travel in war zones or on belligerent ships, except at their own risk; to embargo munitions shipments to belligerents; to withdraw the protection of the Government from American shipping venturing into war zones and to prohibit loans to belligerents.

The question of whether such legislation should be mandatory or discretionary with the President is a point of keen controversy. In some quarters it is argued that the President should be left with discretion to act, thus giving him freedom to make agreements with the belligerents and also to deprive foreign belligerents of knowing with certainty in advance exactly what this country's position might be.

When the State Department was surveying the problem some months

Champagne Flows As Reds Greet Eden

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 28.—Soviet Russia brought out fine food, champagne and glittering trappings today to welcome the young peace envoy of Great Britain, Capt. Anthony Eden.

Bulky Maxim Litvinoff, foreign affairs spokesman for the dictatorship of the proletariat demonstrated again that he could play the social game as regally as it was played in the Russia of the Tsars.

First he staged a formal reception for youthful Eden. Soviet leaders, including the swarthy commissar of war, Klement Voroshiloff, appeared in shining full dress. Their wives came in gleaming gowns. Foreign diplomats stationed here wore their decorations.

Tonight, Litvinoff was host at a brilliant banquet in Spiridonovka House, a dinner blazing with elegant services and formal garments. Tables were loaded with tall glasses—sparkling with Soviet-made champagne—the richest food in all Russia.

Germany Won't Join Conference

Lithuania Will Protest to League Against 'Interference.'

The European Crisis.

Germany's air forces already are numerically stronger than England's, the London Daily Mail quoted Hitler as having told Sir John Simon in their Berlin conversations.

Maxim Litvinoff warned of German preparations for war as the Anglo-Russian peace talks opened with Capt. Anthony Eden's arrival in Moscow.

Hitler planned to restore the two-year conscript service in his army.

Lithuania prepared to file a protest with the League of Nations against "German interference in domestic affairs."

The European gold bloc was menaced as devaluation of the belga appeared imminent.

Senator Nye framed bills for presentation today, to preserve this country's neutrality in event of war.

France warned it would oppose Nazi Brown Shirts' occupation of the demilitarized Saar.

By the Associated Press.

London (Friday), March 29.—The Daily Mail said today Adolf Hitler had informed Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, that Germany already has an air force numerically stronger than Great Britain's.

The Daily Mail did not reveal the source of its information, but it was known Simon returned from Berlin with documents presented to him by Hitler in which, it is understood, Der Fuehrer frankly revealed the extent of Germany's armaments in the air.

The disclosure of Germany's air strength was reported to have caused grave concern to the British cabinet. Ministers held several informal meetings for a preliminary discussion on what is expected to be "a showdown" debate on the entire German situation when Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, returns from a swing through European capitals.

London, March 28.—The British government, facing decision of grave import at the tri-power Stresa conference April 11, tonight studied still another European security scheme in an effort to save something from the wreckage of Anglo-German conversations at Berlin.

Authoritative sources said Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, failed completely to get Adolf Hitler's assent to fundamentals to the present security draft plan, worked out at Anglo-French discussions in London early in February.

An alternative arrangement, therefore, will be sought, compromising differences between the Reich and other powers. It may be presented to France and Italy at the Stresa conference.

Reich Won't Attend.

Germany will not be present at that meeting, Sir John told the House of Commons today.

He vouchsafed little other information about his mission, mentioning "considerable divergences of opinion" between the two governments and declaring fuller information undesirable because exploratory conferences on the continent are continuing.

The House, apparently convinced of the gravity of the present situation, did not press him.

What shape the proposed new security scheme takes will depend

Gold Bloc Split Believed Near In Belga Crisis

Premier Reported Planning 28 Pct. Devaluation; Bourse Closed.

By the United Press.

Brussels, March 28.—The Belgian currency crisis tonight threatened an early split in the embattled European gold bloc.

An order to close all stock exchanges until Monday led to general expectation that the belga will be devalued and that Belgium will go completely off the gold standard she already has abandoned technically.

The order was followed by a scramble of an excited populace to convert cash into real property, such as jewels, clothing and other tangibles.

The order to close the stock exchanges officially was ascribed to a desire to avoid undue speculation, but was believed issued to give the government time to plan a managed currency.

Germans Plan War, Litvinoff Says at Parley

Soviet and Eden Agree on Eastern Locarno Pact for Security.

By the United Press.

Moscow, March 28.—Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff uttered a thinly veiled warning tonight that Germany was preparing for war.

At a reception for Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and peace envoy to Moscow, Litvinoff asserted that no weapon had been invented which fired in one direction only—obviously meaning the possibility of a German attack either toward the east or west.

The foreign commissar refrained from mentioning Germany by name, but his meaning was not lost on his audience.

Litvinoff's speech was an invitation for more cordial relations between the Soviet Union and Great Britain in the interest of peace. Eden responded briefly in similar vein.

Earlier, it had been indicated they were in full agreement on all points discussed in an initial two-hour conversation on the various Franco-British peace proposals, including the eastern Locarno security pact originally sponsored by Litvinoff.

Litvinoff, after declaring that never since the World War had peace been so menaced as now, added:

"Danger Points Everywhere."

"None of us is clever enough to be able to foretell exactly which state or states would be first, or

Lithuania to Protest to League Against 'German Interference'

By the Associated Press.

Kaunas, Lithuania, March 28.—Lithuanian officials tonight disclosed their decision to protest to the League of Nations against "German interference in Lithuania's domestic affairs."

This was the immediate outgrowth of anti-Lithuanian meetings held throughout Germany last night to protest the conviction earlier this week of 91 Germans on charges of plotting to seize the former German territory of Memel, now held by Lithuania.

A military court which tried 126 Nazis on charges of conspiring to bring about an armed uprising in Memel condemned four of them, who were convicted of murder, to die and sentenced 87 others to prison terms ranging from one to 12 years.

A state of feverish excitement gripped this little country as the result of bitter propaganda campaigns that sent popular indignation to white heat. Authorities found themselves hard pressed to maintain order.

The entire Lithuanian police force was held under emergency orders to put down feared disorders.

Much of the tense situation was attributed to anti-Lithuanian news and propaganda broadcast from powerful German stations clearly heard in this country.

The radio also brought lengthy accounts of yesterday's demonstrations in Germany, one of which, at Berlin, culminated in a threatened attack on the Lithuanian legation, which was checked by hastily summoned police reinforcements.

The radio station at Klaipeda (the new name for the City of Memel) waged a successful battle to drown out the big Berlin station and started similar action against the still stronger station in Kienigsberg, East Prussia, which long ago was declared an outlaw station by Lithuanian authorities because of its alleged anti-Lithuanian propaganda.

The government tightened censorship on newspapers. The press

Wallace Target For Bipartisan Senate Attack

George Leads Criticism of Secretary for Keeping Processing Tax Up.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and the whole agriculture adjustment program were targets for a bipartisan arraignment in the Senate yesterday.

Aroused by Wallace's opposition to his move to ease the cotton processing tax burden, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), Georgia, charged the agriculture secretary with making an "irresponsible statement" and with "unfitness" for Cabinet membership.

Determination of the AAA chieftain to retain indefinitely the processing tax on cotton likewise drew a broadside from Senator Jesse R. Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island. Metcalf said it demonstrated a "colossal ignorance of conditions in the cotton growing and cotton textile industries."

George's Charges.

Senator George, whose amendment to the works bill, making possible the use of work relief funds to curtail cotton processing taxation, declared the farmers had sold their markets "for a mess of pottage."

Quoting from the Washington Post, Senator George said Wallace was reported as opposing the George amendment because it would permit farmers "to dip their hands into the United States Treasury."

Senator George, who heretofore has been a consistent supporter of Administration policies, said:

"I do not wish to be understood as making an assault upon the Administration, but I do wish to be understood as saying that any member of the Cabinet of the President of the United States who can say that that amendment is an invitation to the farmers to 'dip their hands into the United States Treasury demonstrates to my mind his unfitness for a place in the Cabinet, when the joint resolution raises the most monumental fund into which every class and any class the President desires to admit can dip their hands into the Treasury of the United States.

"The statement is an irresponsible statement."

Supported by Thomas.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, supported the Georgian's stand. Thomas charged that Wallace's statement had sent the price of cotton still further down. He said it seemed that every time the price of agricultural commodities started climbing, the Secretary of Agriculture or someone in his department made a statement that sent them down again.

Senator George also criticized Wallace's reported observation at a press conference that the processing tax on cotton would be increased rather than decreased, if the present price slump continues.

The George statement was said to reflect a spreading sentiment among Southern members that the processing tax is in a large measure responsible for the loss of foreign markets and the shutting down of domestic textile mills.

"The Secretary even says," said George, "that it may be necessary to raise the processing tax. Here is a man clothed with the awful power to fix the tax on a necessity of life required by 125,000,000 people, and he is threatening to raise that tax."

George said he had never asked that the processing tax on cotton alone be lifted. He declared he said "the time will come when we will be obliged to lift the processing tax on meat, on bread and on clothing." He said the processing tax may not be the sole cause of the trouble cotton now is experiencing, but the fact remains that cotton is now 10½ cents a pound, and the processing tax of 4 2-10 cents a pound—$21 a bale—is a sales tax of 40 per cent upon the raw material.

Metcalf's Attack.

Senator Metcalf said Wallace's stand on processing taxes is "in complete harmony with the academic utterings of economic quack doctors, many of whom have never seen a textile mill or a cotton field and are unable to understand why mills can not run while foreign goods are underselling them."

He said it would seem "the pinnacle of economic ego" to defend such a position while "Secretary Wallace and his business busters" are heaping new burdens on the cotton industry.

"To my mind," said Metcalf, "Secretary Wallace's conclusion and his press statement is ill-advised, unfair and indicative of a lack of knowledge of the cotton industry."

Between You and Me

Ickes' Fault Was Lingering Too Long at the Altar of Public Honesty.

By Raymond Clapper

THE crucifixion of Harold Ickes, who lingered too long at the altar of public honesty, is the latest incident to come out of the incredible bungling which has attended the works relief program.

During the formulation of plans for spending the $5,000,000,000 which Congress now is handing to the President, Ickes has been treated like an office boy. He has not been let in on the plans. He doesn't know, for instance, whether the housing program will be given to his organization or transferred to Harry Hopkins, who will hold the dominating position under Mr. Roosevelt in the new set-up. Although Ickes has had more experience in handling public works projects than anyone else, he has been left to twiddle his thumbs and wonder how much of the program would be given to him. He gets most of his information as to what is going on from his subordinates. They pick it up by grapevine, chiefly from underlings of other agencies who come into PWA to obtain data for various phases of the forthcoming program.

One of Hopkins' men is said to have prepared an executive order outlining the works relief set-up to be signed by the President when the appropriation is approved. He has been showing it around to some intimates, it is said. Ickes doesn't know what's in it.

When House and Senate committees wanted information about the programs contemplated under the works relief bill, the Administration sent up Admiral Peoples, of the Treasury Department procurement division. He boned up for a few days at PWA before testifying, but when the committee asked him to explain various figures which he offered, he could not. Therefore, he made a perfectly safe witness for an Administration which has deliberately resolved not to divulge any plans in advance of obtaining the appropriation.

The only thing that has been said against Ickes was that he was too hard-boiled in protecting the Government's money. He took too much time, it is said, in trying to prevent graft and chiseling. That is perfectly understandable in the light of his personality and in light of the fact that he sits in the Cabinet chair which was disgraced by at least one predecessor, the spot where Teapot Dome, Elk Hills, land grabs and the Ballinger scandal developed. No wonder Ickes tries to be careful. Maybe he is subject to criticism for being too slow. But it would not seem to be an offense warranting his exile from the counsels of the Administration. His advice ought to be worth something.

The works relief show will now star Hopkins and Tugwell, the jocund pair after whom Mr. Roosevelt has named a span of mules on his Warm Springs farm. They are the moving spirits in the preparation now going on. They are buddies. Lee Pressman, one of the Tugwell-Jerome Frank lawyers who was a victim of the recent purge at AAA, is now chief legal adviser to Hopkins. Already a healthy slice of the proposed program, covering rural rehabilitation and electrification, has been turned over to Tugwell. Around PWA they suspect that housing will go to Hopkins.

Ickes has built a thorough organization, one which he put together only by stubbornly resisting the attempted patronage raids of Farley. His organization is full of highly skilled technicians, who in almost two years of PWA experience have learned a good deal about public works of all kinds. But it begins to appear now as if only a minimum of advantage will be taken of this organization while other new ones will be set up to handle the major portion of the new works program.

Despite the White House announcement that no plans have been decided upon or will be until the works appropriation is passed, a good many plans have been prepared all ready for final okay. The only trouble has been that some of these plans leaked out prematurely and a smokescreen had to be thrown up quickly to nip possible congressional criticism during the last stages of enacting the legislation. That is why it was hastily announced that Mr. Roosevelt would be the head man. He always has been. Under the old PWA he approved all allotments. His role will be the same in the new set-up as in the previous one, but the recommendations now will come largely from Hopkins. Ickes, if he remains in the Administration, will be a member of a board along with Tugwell and some others. But the men who have had the President's ear during the recent preparations for putting the program into effect are Hopkins and Tugwell.

* * * *

All of this may seem like personal detail. It is a great deal more than that for it demonstrates the extent of the happy-go-lucky, improvising, bungling and whimsical mismanagement of the greatest peace-time project ever undertaken in this country—the major drive which is to determine whether we can pull ourselves out of this unemployment crisis by planned expenditures. A measure which by its very nature calls for a maximum of careful planning emerges in the cold gray dawn attended only by the hasty and capricious ministrations of political midwifery.

* * * *

From such parts of the amazing preface to this experiment which have become known the only inference possible is that the country is being headed into a glorified CWA program. Ickes and Hopkins have diametrically opposed beliefs about spending.

Ickes believes in careful, thrifty spending on the assumption that when it is all over the Government will have something to show for its expenditure. It is more the idea of utilizing depression conditions to improve the capital plant of the Nation. Its fault, from the point of view of the pump-priming theory, is that it feeds out money too slowly to appreciably affect business and employment.

Hopkins takes the opposite view. That is, dish out the money fast; maybe there will be considerable waste, but do something and hurry it up so that people are put to work. That was the theory on which CWA raked leaves and got into so much graft that it had to be abandoned. The whole business will be pitched in faster tempo.

There is another difference. Ickes wanted to keep control of expenditures tightly under thumb here at Washington. Hopkins leans more toward dishing out the money and letting State and local authorities spend it. It runs greater risk of being caught on sticky fingers that way, but it is faster than the Ickes method.

* * * *

The appalling thing is that Congress would appropriate such a huge sum as this without insisting upon knowing something more about the plans. That Congress let the Administration get away with this is one of the most astounding performances in legislative history. And the more that is learned about the program, the more reason the Administration apparently had for not wanting to disclose its program in advance. There was no program to disclose that would stand the light of investigation. They are just getting it together now despite the fact that the idea of a huge appropriation was decided upon long before Christmas.

But what is $5,000,000,000 among friends in these times?

The reason Senator Elmer Thomas is not going through with his previously announced filibuster on the works bill conference report is that when Senator Carter Glass, in charge of the bill, accepted the Thomas silver amendment, he did so only on the promise that Thomas would not filibuster if the amendment was knocked out in conference. It was a grandstand play only.

Trade 'Luring' By TVA Denied By Roosevelt

Special Interests Assailed in His Reply to Ohio Charges.

By the Associated Press.

The utilities war resounded on half a dozen capital fronts yesterday, with President Roosevelt joining in the give and take.

The tense feeling between the Administration and private utility interests was plainly shown by developments which included:

A letter by the President in which he emphatically denied what he termed reports that the Tennessee Valley Authority was attempting to "lure" industries from Ohio to the South and charged that "special interests are constantly attempting to thwart the TVA program.

Testimony by S. R. Inch, president of the Electric Bond & Share Co., before the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the electric and gas industries could be leaders in the drive for business recovery "if given fair regulation instead of the proposed destructive public utilities (holding company) bill."

Other Developments.

An assertion by David E. Lilienthal, TVA director, that a "change" in the European situation might bring a "desperate condition" of power shortage. Both Lilienthal and Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of TVA, urged the House Military Affairs Committee to approve a bill which would make TVA's constitutionality certain.

A charge on the Senate floor by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, that "canned propaganda" is being used against the pending measure that would put public utility holding companies out of business in five years. This was the measure referred to by Inch.

Replying to Wheeler, Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, said in a statement:

"We have repeatedly explained how the passage of this bill would cause enormous losses in public utility securities. * * * We suggest that any one in doubt on this question should write to his Senator or Representative for a copy of the bill and read it."

Testimony before the Federal Trade Commission by one of its investigators that there had been a "write up" of $29,667,135 in the capital accounts of the Duke Power Co.

The assertion by Louis H. Egan, president of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., of St. Louis, before the Interstate Commerce Committee that his company could reduce its power rates by $2,000,000 a year by using the TVA's method of figuring power plant costs.

Roosevelt's Letter.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter was addressed to and made public by Representative Thom (Democrat), Ohio. Replying to a protest by the Representative after reports that TVA was attempting to persuade Northern industries to move to the valley area, the Chief Executive said:

"It is a very definite policy of the Tennessee Valley Authority that no such action be taken in respect to Ohio or any other region.

"The Ohio Chamber of Commerce (which was mentioned as the source of the report) should not make such a statement without definite proof."

The President then asked that the chamber furnish such proof and said, "You are aware, of course, that special interests are constantly attempting to thwart the program which Congress has set up for the Tennessee Valley."

George B. Chandler, secretary of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, said last night in a statement, however that "either the President has been misinformed, or some of the over-enthusiastic employes of the Authority have been speaking out of turn."

Activities Cited.

He added that in Cleveland last summer "a Mr. F. Woods Beckman, describing himself as an assistant personnel director of TVA, called upon Munson Havens, secretary of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, to secure the names of proper persons to act as industrial commissioner or assistant industrial commissioner of the Authority. His duties were to be the solicitation of indusrties for TVA."

Chandler also asserted that Harvey Campbell, executive vice president of the Detroit Board of Commerce, had been similarly solicited.

At Columbus, Ohio, Karl S. Dixon, assistant secretary of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, said the organization had letters in its files to "prove our case."

Inch was one of the long list of utility officials who have vehemently assailed the pending Wheeler-Rayburn bill to eliminate public utility holding companies.

Sees Receiverships.

"A large number of operating company receiverships would inevitably follow the passage of this bill because necessary financing now obtained from holding companies would not be forthcoming," he said. "This would * * * increase costs to electric and gas users for the simple reason that it would increase the cost of money necessary."

Egan, tall and broad-shouldered, said of TVA:

"The trouble with the TVA yardstick is that it is made with rubber. It is not 3 feet long—it is 2 feet long sometimes and 4 feet long other times."

The TVA legislation before the Military Affairs Committee was drafted by Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, after a Federal judge in Alabama held the Tennessee Valley operations unconstitutional.

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky, member of the committee, asserted he would do all in his power to smash the Tennessee Valley "yardstick." He said it was taking work away from coal miners.

Men Tire of Life More Quickly, Anti-Suicide Worker Declares

Women Possess Greater Stamina in Battle of Existence.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Miss Lona Bonnell, who sits at a desk all day and talks with people who are planning to commit suicide, believes that women have more stamina than men in the battle of life.

In the five years she has been with the National Save-a-Life League, Miss Bonnell estimated today, only one woman has come before her to every three men.

"Women seem to have more endurance in meeting the vicissitudes of life," she said. "They are more hopeful—always looking forward to what tomorrow may bring."

It is Miss Bonnell's job to sit there and listen to people's woes, and then tell them why they should not kill themselves. To the best of her knowledge, she always wins the argument.

"We are often asked why people who are intent on suicide should come to us first," she said. "In most cases it is because they are so thoroughly despondent that they do not want to talk to their families or friends, but they do feel the urge to talk to someone.

"We give them spiritual counsel and help them to restore their faith in God."

A woman of middle age, Miss Bonnell can be tender and motherly or sharp and severe, as the case requires.

One day a man who had been waiting his turn in her twelfth floor office made a bolt for the window, and she spoke pretty sharply to him.

"You sit down there and be still," she told him, and he did.

Miss Bonnell said she thought more persons were using the high building route to suicide than ever before. She thinks that is a "horrible" way to do it. Illuminating gas and poison are the next most widely used methods, she said.

Last year Miss Bonnell held 3,498 interviews, mostly with persons between the ages of 25 and 50. There was one high school girl who was oppressed by poverty, and several college students who had "gone beyond their depths in philosophy."

The high school girl already had taken poison and was recovering. She promised never to try that again.

The Save-a-Life League was founded in 1906 by the Rev. Dr. Harry M. Warren, who was surprised by the response he received when he invited anyone contemplating suicide to come in and talk it over with him. Ten persons called the day after he extended the invitation, during a sermon.

Why Wives Quit Jobs Puzzles First Lady

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Advocating greater attention to surveys of the employment field so that young people could find jobs, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared today that it was a "mistake" to allow newcomers to be trained for already overcrowded professions.

Mrs. Roosevelt opened a discussion on the topic, "Should Schools and Colleges Fit Girls to Jobs?" at the career conference of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations.

"The great majority of girls today are going to have to earn their own living," she said.

Commenting on the necessity of many married women to return to wage earning, she added:

"It makes one wonder why some of them ever leave their jobs and get out of practice."

Naval Bomber Falls Into Sea; Two Lose Lives

Fleet Moves Back to Its Pacific Bases as Maneuvers End.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 28.—The United States fleet, its sensational secret tactical exercises completed, moved back to the Los Angeles and San Diego bases tonight under a shadow of tragedy—minus a bombing plane that crashed into the sea in battle maneuvers with the loss of two lives.

During simulated night bombing operations off the Southern California coast, one of the bombing planes of the aircraft carrier Lexington plunged into the ocean 20 miles north of San Diego last night.

Lieut. (J. G.) Edwin G. Kelly, pilot, and Aviation Machinist Mate R. Carillo, both of San Diego, were killed.

Radio orders flashed from Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander in chief to the 100 battleships, carriers, cruisers and destroyers to cease battle maneuvers and search for the victims. Scores of searchlights stabbed the darkness as the hunt got under way.

The bomber was one of the VB-1B squadron of 18 from the Lexington. The 17 other bombers returned safely to the deck of the carrier. There were several hundred planes engaged in the secret tactical night exercises, a prelude to the annual fleet problem to be staged in the North Pacific Ocean, May 3 to June 10.

Destroyers were the first to reach the scene. Bits of wreckage were found on the water, indicating the big bomber apparently dived into the ocean under power and cracked up, the engine and fuselage sinking and carrying down the fliers. No trace of the bodies was found. Navy officers reported the depth of the ocean at the point, northwest of La Jolla, would make salvage operations impossible.

Caretaker Is Hurt as Craft Burns Off Easton, Md.

By the Associated Press.

Easton, Md., March 28.—An 80-foot yacht, owned by some members of the United States Senate, was destroyed today by fire, which followed an explosion of its gasoline tank, as it rode at anchor off the Jefferson Island Club on Poplar Island.

Carroll Neucomb, 28, of Cambridge, caretaker of the yacht, was burned. He leaped from the blazing craft and was found unconscious in a smaller boat by rescuers. Neucomb was rushed to the hospital here. He was burned on the body, face and arms.

The yacht, known as Jefferson Island Club, was burned to the water's edge. It was said to have been owned by Senators Millard E. Tydings, Harry B. Hawes and Key Pittman.

RFC Will Give Railroad Help In Refinancing

$28,978,000 Bonds of the Colorado & Southern to Be Underwritten.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The RFC has agreed to underwrite the refunding of $28,978,000 in first mortgage bonds of the Colorado & Southern Railroad. This was announced yesterday by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, who declared the purpose of the transaction will be to extend the entire issue ten years after its maturity on May 1.

At the same time, the RFC took cognizance of the Chicago court suit involving the loan in 1932 of $90,000,000 to the bank of Gen. Charles G. Dawes. Figures were issued to dispute charges that assets of the old "Dawes" bank have been dissipated by sale to the present "Dawes" bank of Chicago.

The railroad refinancing is the first of several projected new moves by the RFC in relief of the railroads. Chairman Jones announced that, subject to approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission and junior security holders, the plan is to offer bondholders a new ten-year bond or cash.

Extra Collateral Up.

As additional security for the new bond issue, Mr. Jones said the Colorado & Southern, assisted by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, has agreed to put up approximately $11,500,000 in extra collateral. The Burlington road owns a 70 per cent interest in the Colorado & Southern.

While details remain to be worked out, the RFC chairman said that under present plans the RFC will take such part of the extended bond issue as is not converted—an operation somewhat similar to the refunding of a Baltimore & Ohio bond issue last year. Subsequent sale of bonds held by the RFC will depend largely on market conditions, he declared.

The bond issue to be extended bears 4½ per cent interest. The extra collateral, Mr. Jones said, will consist of $8,500,000 other bonds of the Colorado & Southern and the Denver & Northern, of Texas; $2,000,000 general mortgage bonds of the Burlington, and $1,000,000 in Government securities.

Reveals Status of Loan.

In answer to the court accusation by a group of stockholders in the old "Dawes" bank—the Central Republic—that the RFC countenanced "manipulation and juggling of accounts" by former Vice President Dawes and other bank directors, Mr. Jones issued a short statement giving the status of the much-debated Dawes loan.

The loan was negotiated in June, 1932, the RFC putting up $90,000,000 and other Chicago banks $5,000,000. The RFC's portion of collections to date amounts to $37,583,905.60—$4,135,278.76 of which was for the payment of interest.

According to the court action, assets of the Central Republic have been impaired by sale at low figures to the City National Bank & Trust Co.—the present "Dawes" bank. In reply to this, Mr. Jones asserted that only $14,259,032.52 of collections were obtained by sale of the old bank's assets to the new bank, and added:

"Since the sale was made at the full face value of the collateral, with accrued interest, there could be no loss to the Central Republic."

Mr. Jones commented that he would be "surprised if we didn't have some loss on the loan," but pointed to the continuing driblets of collections as evidence the assets are live ones. For the first 20 days in March the RFC collected $452,293 on the loan; in February, $548,868; in January, $293,590; in December, $243,602, and in November, $1,129,627.

Has Holding Firm Note.

Part of the assets behind the Dawes loan is a $2,000,000 past-due note of Public Utilities Securities Corporation, a holding company which controls, through another holding company, more than 1,000 operating subsidiaries. Asked if this does not put the RFC in the public utility business, the chairman replied:

"We hope we aren't, but I imagine we are."

Mr. Jones remarked, in explanation of the Dawes loan, that failure to advance RFC money at that time would have brought on the banking holiday ten months before it finally came, in March, 1933. The Chicago court action, he said, is a counter-suit by a group of stockholders fighting $14,000,000 in stock assessments sued for by the bank receiver.

Whiteford, Attorney, Sued for $100,000 Libel

Damages of $100,000 are asked in a libel suit filed yesterday by R. A. Harmon, Washington attorney, against Roger J. Whiteford, also an attorney. The suit was filed in District Supreme Court.

Mr. Harmon alleges in the suit that Whiteford issued a statement which criticized him. Whiteford, it is said, issued the statement in his capacity as attorney for the Washington Real Estate Board. It is charged that the statement referred to the filing of suits against various real estate firms who were acting at attorneys for their clients.

Search Pushed for 2 Couples Kidnaped by Fleeing Bandits

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 28.—Fear was growing tonight for the lives of two couples missing more than 24 hours since they were kidnaped as hostages in their own car by a trio of bank bandits near Janesville, Wis.

Illinois highway police squads took up the search today, patroling northern Illinois roads from Chicago to the Wisconsin line and westward toward the Mississippi.

They found no trace of the green sedan in which the two men and two women, their identities unknown, were riding when the fugitive robbers commandeered their automobile and sped through Janesville.

Officers feared the bandits, who had raided the State Bank of Mauston, Wis., yesterday and then fled without loot when fired on, might kill the four hostages to end pursuit and prevent identification.

They had threatened other victims along the highway from Mauston south yesterday as they stole four cars, crashing one into a truck.

"They told us very plainly," said Miss Aimee Winrich, of Madison, one of the kidnaped motorists, "that we would be killed if we misbehaved." They had asked Miss Winrich the most direct route to Chicago.

Russell Hale, cashier of the Mauston Bank, was recovering today from a flesh wound in the shoulder received when he gave battle to the raiders and put them to flight without loot. One man was scooping up cash when Hale opened fire.

"There was a revolver near the vault," he related today, "and a rifle in it. I grabbed the revolver and fired. The second bandit shot at me and hit me. I ducked behind the vault door, thinking to get the rifle. By the time I got out of the vault the men had gone. I was lucky I wasn't killed."

The green sedan and its occupants were seized at 2:30 p. m. yesterday and were not seen after passing Janesville. Lacking an accurate description, authorities could not trace the ownership of the car.

McGalliard suffered a fracture of the jaw and internal injuries. The plane, a training ship, crashed after McGalliard flew into a low fog bank and hit the tops of trees.

Maryland Senate Honors the Dead

Pays Tribute to Ex-Members at Memorial Service.

The roll of dead showed a total of eight in the two-year period, some of whom served in the Senate more than a decade ago, and according to custom, Senators from the respective counties delivered brief eulogies. Those honored were:

Thomas T. Atkinson, Baltimore City; George C. Peverly, St. Marys County; A. Theodore Brady, Anne Arundel County; Benjamin W. Fox, Baltimore City; Joseph Andrews, Dorchester County; W. Earle Withgott, Talbot County; Frank C. Norwood, Frederick County; and Lawrence B. Towers, Caroline County.

Simses Reduce Minus to 2,530 By Grand Slam

Culbertson Asks 'Is This a System?' as Rival Lifts One Call to Seven.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—One tremendous rubber today enabled P. Hal Sims and his wife, Dorothy, to more than clip in half the 5,500-point lead built up by Ely and Josephine Culbertson and end the twenty-eighth of the scheduled 150 rubbers trailing by only 2,530 points.

Until the twenty-eighth rubber the cards and play seemed to be favoring the Culbertsons, but on the final rubber of the day the Sims couple chalked up a plus score of 2,970 points. On one hand they scored a grand slam, the first of the match.

It was, perhaps, the most amazing hand thus far. Mrs. Sims, with a strong hand, which included the singleton Jack of Clubs, bid one club, and Culbertson passed.

Sims drawled "Seven clubs."

Mrs. Sims Amazed.

Mrs. Culbertson passed, and the astonished Mrs. Sims did likewise. Culbertson studied his hand, looked at Sims, but finally passed in a manner which seemed regretful.

"By the way, Hal," he said, "is this contract bridge we are playing?"

Sims thought a moment.

"I was under the impression it might be pinochle," he said.

Culbertson led the club two and Sims spilled eight clubs, including the ace, king and queen, on the table. Mrs. Sims seemed less tense and relaxed in her chair.

The hand follows:

North (Mrs. Culbertson)
S—K Q 6 4 3 2
H—8 7
D—Q 10 8
C—10 4

West (Sims)	East (Mrs. Sims)
S—5	S—A 9 7
H—A Q 6 2	H—J 10 5 4
D—Blank	D—A K J 4 2
C—A K Q 9 8 6 5 3	C—J

South (Culbertson)
S—J 10 8
H—K 9 3
D—9 7 6 5 3
C—7 2

Is This a System?

Afterward, Culbertson said: "I still don't believe there is such a bid in any system, even the Sims system.

"One club—seven club. Bah!"

Smiling, Sims asquiesced.

"I agree heartily with you, Ely," he said.

The hand wasn't made by Mrs. Sims without a nice play. She couldn't afford to take the heart finesse. After capturing the original club lead from Culbertson with her jack she led the diamond two, trumping in dummy.

This enabled her to drop the diamond queen later, after she had led another round of trumps. She scored 1,640 points on the hand.

Freethinkers Accuse Church Of George Washington Fraud

Group Demands Text of Prayer Be Removed From N.Y. Chapel.

New York, March 28.—The Freethinkers of America, Inc., today accused Trinity Church of perpetrating a "religious fraud" on the public by representing George Washington as a "fervent Christian" who prayed for his country.

In a suit filed in Supreme Court, the Freethinkers demanded that a tablet bearing a text headed "Washington's Prayer for Our Country" be removed from St. Paul's Chapel, in lower Broadway, and that the chapel be restrained from selling cards reproducing the "pretended prayer."

Contending Washington "is never known to have made a prayer to the Christian Diety," the Freethinkers charged the chapel with obtaining money under false pretenses through the sale of the cards.

In their action, the Freethinkers seek to recover 20 cents which they allegedly paid for two of the cards and ask that the rector, wardens and vestrymen of the church be compelled to pay $5,000 punitive damages.

The text inscribed on the placque and reproduced on the cards, the complaint charges, is a "garbled and falsified" version of a circular letter written by Washington in 1783 to "the Governors of all the States on disbanding the Army."

The complaint sets forth that the wording of the letter was "a sort of pious gesture in the usage of the times" and alleges that it was distorted "into a pretended petitionary prayer by Washington to the Deity."

In filing the action, Joseph Lewis, president of the Freethinkers, issued a statement expressing the hope that it would "act as a deterrent against the further dissemination of false statements by religious organizations upon our eminent dead."

"Time and time again," he said, "it has been pointed out that the pictures showing George Washington praying at Valley Forge are forgeries, yet religionists insist upon depicting Washington in this ignominious manner.

"A victory in this case will do much toward stopping these pious frauds."

On the letterhead of the statement was a list of honorary presidents which included Herbert Asbury, Clarence Darrow, Dr. John Dewey, Edouard Herriot, Rupert Hughes and Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Army's Horses Bring Farm Lad Happiness

By the Associated Press.

Volin, S. Dak., March 28.—His eyes bulging and happy tears streaming down his cheeks, Leroy Johnson, 12, received a team of Army horses, Uncle Sam's gift, to help his "dad" lift the homestead mortgage.

The Army Artillery Corps bought them with donations of pennies after Leroy's plea for an "old team" had been circulated among Army posts.

The farm lad ran to meet the big, brown Army truck as it turned into the gate on the Johnson farm shortly after noon with the horses from Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Clambering up the back end of the truck, Leroy got his first glimpse of the horses and gulped:

"Gosh, ain't they beauts!"

Deficit in Virginia Bars Pay Return

Comptroller's Report Says Chance Is Slight.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 28.—A definite indication was seen tonight that restoration of State salary cuts would not be made before the end of the fiscal year, with the submission of a report by Comptroller E. R. Combs to Gov. Peery that showed a deficit is almost certain to exist on July 1.

Should a surplus exist, the Governor would be compelled to restore the cut, but with a deficit he can not do so.

The comptroller's report, covering the first eight months of the fiscal year up to March 1, showed total collections of $38,423,240, an increase of $14,000,000 over the same period last year. Expenses for the eight-month period amounted to $37,168,689, an increase of $8,548,783 over expenditures during the comparative time in the previous year.

There was $10,393,459 in the general treasury on February 28, an increase of $1,544,483, the report showed, but Budget Director J. H. Bradford said the rate of increase would still not be enough to retire the present deficit of $2,000,000.

Accused Slayer Is Declared Sane

Trial Date Set in Murder of Galax Police Chief.

By the Associated Press.

Independence, Va., March 28.—After deliberating 55 minutes this afternoon a jury commission in Grayson County Circuit Court held that Howard Delp, 22, accused of slaying P. C. Martin, Galax chief of police, February 21, is sane.

Judge Horace Sutherland ordered a venire of 50 men be summoned to report Saturday morning, when Delp's trial under a murder indictment will start.

H. P. Burnett, Commonwealth's attorney, made the closing argument for the prosecution. R. W. Parsons was foreman of the jury.

The hearing was on the sanity issue.

State Will Ask For Rehearing On Tax Ruling

Virginia Denied Right to Collect Income Levy on Certain Dividends.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 28.—Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett said this afternoon that the tax department would file a petition for a rehearing of the case in which the supreme court of appeals today decided that the State can not collect income tax on dividends paid on shares of stock of public utilities which pay franchise and other taxes.

Should the rehearing be denied, or should the court reaffirm its decision handed down today, legislation would be sought to bring utility dividend payments back within the scope of the income tax laws, Mr. Morrissett declared.

The tax commissioner said the amount of taxes involved in the decision could not be calculated on short notice, but he termed the loss to State revenues "material." Inability to collect income tax on utility dividends would adversely affect the budget, he said, but indicated the situation would not be critical.

Petition for Rehearing.

The petition for a rehearing would be handled by the State law department, under the direction of Attorney General Abram P. Staples.

Today's decision was the culmination of a suit brought by Eppa Hunton 4th, executor of the estate of Eppa Hunton, jr., in which the executor asked the Richmond Hustings Court to invalidate income tax assessments on dividends amounting to $66,366 received by Eppa Hunton, jr., in the years 1927, 1928 and 1929. The lower court denied the application and the case was taken to the Supreme Court on an appeal.

Dividends involved in the case at point were derived from the stocks of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, the Chesapeake & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, Norfolk & Western, Southern, Virginia Electric & Power Co., and the Appalachian Electric Power Co.

Opinion of Court.

The opinion handed down today, from which Justice Gregory dissented, was written by the late Justice Louis S. Epes. It says, in part:

"It seems plain to us that to impose a tax upon the dividends derived thereon by the owner of a share of stock is to tax the share of stock; and that the constitution of Virginia prohibits the imposition of a tax upon the dividends received upon the shares of stock in issue."

It also points out that the constitutional convention of 1902 apparently recognized that immunity from further taxes as provided by section 177 of the constitution embraced immunity from taxes other than the property tax.

An interesting sidelight is that Eppa Hunton, jr., was a member of this convention.

Embattled Tenants Warned Not to Gather

Marked Tree, Ark., March 28 (AP).—C. T Carpenter, attorney for the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, who reported that his front porch was fired upon by a group of men Tuesday night, today distributed circulars among sharecroppers in the union advising them to abstain from public meetings.

"Any unlawful act, even in the defense of your right, might cause bloodshed," the circular, carrying Carpenter's name, said. "This would bring all efforts in your behalf into disrepute and defeat the very purpose for which you are striving."

Barbara Hutton Dodges Press, Speeds to Reno in Private Car

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Her lips sealed by advice of counsel, the Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani was Reno-bound to divorce her prince tonight, after eluding curious crowds on her arrival from Europe.

Through an elaborate ruse, the Woolworth heiress was transferred secretly to shore as the liner Bremen docked, and tonight was reported speeding westward in her private railroad car.

Fellow passengers said the princess left the liner at Quarantine and was taken to the Jersey shore, but two detectives at the pier insisted she evaded the waiting crowds by using the third-class gangplank after the ship had docked.

The carefully engineered strategy was set in motion as early as last night when the princess, who has complained she was "just a polo widow," moved out of her suite and passed the last night at sea in another cabin.

When newspaper men boarded the Bremen at Quarantine they were permitted to gather the impression that she was in her suite, resting.

Just outside her door they encountered her chauffeur and bodyguard, Clinton Gardiner, who stood there toying with a sawed-off billiard cue throughout the ride up the harbor.

Her attorney, Millard F. Tompkins, jr., who also boarded the ship at Quarantine, meanwhile had disappeared.

Finally, when the ship reached its pier, the door to the royal suite was thrown open and while there was plenty of luggage inside there was no princess.

Her cousin, James Woolworth Donahue, who accompanied her on the voyage, said he had no idea where she had gone and declared he had not seen her since last night.

Senators Kill Pink Slip Law By 53-16 Vote

Income Tax Gag Assured by Move; Bill Now Goes to Conference.

President immediately designated Senator La Follette to serve in his place. La Follette also declined, for the same reason.

Metcalf Named Conferee.

In the end, the chair appointed Senator Jesse Metcalf (Republican), of Rhode Island, who voted for the bill. Other Senate conferees named by the Vice President were Senators Harrison, King, of Utah, and George, of Georgia (Democrats), and Keyes, of New Hampshire (Republican).

As the bill sped on its way to conference, Senate Majority Leader Robinson, who has passed most of the last two months battling to get the $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill out of its deadlock, evoked the laughter of colleagues when his diction became tangled.

"Now that the pink relief bill is out of the way * * *" said the majority leader.

Shorn of Silver, Relief Bill Goes To House Today

Conferees Lop Off Thomas Rider, Reach Accord on All Points.

raged for weeks. As now rearranged in conference, the clause still permits payment of prevailing wages on permanent Treasury projects, allowing the President to pay "security" wages elsewhere, if this does not damage the general pay structure.

Although these changes may cause some discussion in the Senate, there appeared little doubt the measure will march through the House at a quick-step and receive Senate approval with little delay.

If passed this week, it may be forwarded by plane to the President, now on a fishing cruise aboard the yacht Nourmahal.

Some Changes Forced.

Although both House and Senate conferees were forced to give and take, it appeared Senate conferees, headed by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, obtained a slight edge in conference bargaining. A determined stand by House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan and his associates, however, forced several changes.

These included:

1. Approval, after a stiff fight, of the so-called George amendment attached in the Senate, which would permit the President to allocate work relief funds to the AAA for payment of farm benefits, in lieu of processing taxes.

2. Elimination of the $40,000,000 "earmarked" on motion of Senator Bronson Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, to continue some 40,000 schools in operation until the end of this school year. Senator Glass insisted the money might still be expended, however, under a new amendment, including 'assistance for educational" services under a $300,000,000 sum earmarked for professional clerical persons.

3. Elimination of a Senate amendment requiring "sanitary plumbing work" performed under the program to be let by separate contract.

Shift in Authority.

4. Substitution of authority for the President to establish and prescribe the duties of agencies handling the works fund, in lieu of the broad specific powers the House had prescribed for the President's administration of the works set-up.

5. Insertion of specific authority for expenditure of works money for "new buildings" and "reconstruction of buildings" under War or Navy Department control, despite the prohibition against use of the money for clearly military purposes, Nonmilitary improvements to posts, reservations, etc., already had been sanctioned by the Senate.

Otherwise, the largest appropriation in history was left as it passed the Senate late last week, including the eight general "earmarkings" written into the bill, with authority for the President to shift $800,000,000 between these classifications.

Conferees stayed in session long past dinner time in ironing out differences that Tuesday threatened to deadlock the group. About 7 o'clock, however, the men emerged smiling from the committee room that had held them for two days of nearly continuous strife.

Senator Carter Glass would venture no forecast on the probable Senate reception of the report.

"That's something I can't foresee," he said.

No Definite Word.

With the bill nearer to law, President Roosevelt let it be known that he would not make public any definite plans for its administration until it actually has been passed. The President, in a telegram relayed to the White House by Marvin McIntyre, his secretary at Miami, said no definite plan would be determined until after the bill is signed.

Return of Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, to Washington is expected to be the signal to go ahead. Hopkins still was in Florida yesterday, having gone there with the President.

Secretary Ickes, meanwhile, said he had no basis for forming an opinion as to the new set-up. He made this statement after a trip to the White House, the second in two days. It was learned that Ickes has not been consulted in plans for formation of the new works administration.

Asked how men could be put to work under the new plan, Ickes replied:

"I am not administering the new program."

He added that there was to be no inference drawn from his statement as to whether he would administer some part of it.

Hopkins in Key Post.

Hopkins is expected to be second in command to the President in the works administration, with the huge housing program as well as other relief measures under his jurisdiction. Next in importance is expected to be Undersecretary Rexford G. Tugwell, with nearly $1,000,000,000 to spend for various forms of rural relief.

One of the purposes of the Administration is expected to be to put the money into circulation rapidly. Hopkins is noted for his ability as a rapid spender. Ickes, nevertheless, again cautioned care in spending the money.

"I believe in all the speed that can be made consistent with safeguarding the money," he said. "I don't believe in scattering it. I believe as many as possible of the projects should be self-liquidating."

PWA Projects Limited.

Ickes added he thinks the $110,000,0000 now in the housing funds and an additional $400,000,000 could be spent within a year. At the same time he revealed that the PWA has only $100,000,000 in projects ready to start immediately. This would be only an insignificant percentage of the entire program and was taken to indicate the comporoatively small part the PWA actually is ready to play in an immediate work plan. Ickes added, however, that there were about $2,000,000,000 in non-Federal work and $1.0000,000,000 in Federal projects "lined up," but not actually "ready to go."

Four Walkouts Are Threatened By Million Men

Coal, Auto, Rubber, Textile Industries Seethe in Labor Crisis.

Richberg, Sidney Hillman, labor representative on the staff, and A. W. Harriman, NRA executive officer.

The present contract between the miners and the operators expires at midnight Sunday. There is no provision for its automatic extension and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, insists that the men will not go to work without a wage and hours agreement.

The miners are asking for a 30-hour week and a compensating increase in wages. The present contract calls for a 35-hour week. Operators have steadfastly refused to accede to the demands.

There is more at stake in the controversy than the wage and hour contract. The miners' organization has been insisting on passage by Congress of the 30-hour bill. Acceptance of a contract providing for a longer working week at this time might be construed as an admission of defeat.

Richberg Sees Crisis.

Richberg said that he considered the situation serious. He pointed out that the bituminous coal code with its wage and hour provisions is at stake. He said a strike would affect every industry in the country. Coal operators, however, insist there is sufficient coal above ground to supply demands for several weeks.

In addition to wages and hours provisions, the controversy also involves differentials in wages among various fields. Operators are not in agreement among themselves on this subject.

"We are trying to determine what the NRA ought to do and to decide upon what power it might have to act," Richberg said after the conference.

Two members of the Recovery Board, Richberg explained, are participating in the settlement attempt only as advisers. They are Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, and William P. Witherow, a director of the Pittsburgh Coal Corporation. Both were appointed to the board last week by President Roosevelt.

Representing operators in the meeting were S. D. Brady, jr., Charles O'Neill, J. D. A. Morrow, W. L. Robison, L. T. Putnam, M. L. Garvey, J. D. Francis, R. E. Taggart, J. G. Hoffstat and H. G. Kennedy. Representing the miners were Frank Miley, James Mark, P. T. Fagan, Percy Tetlow, Van A. Bittner, William Turnblazer, John Sexton, Sam Caddy, John L. Lewis, Thomas Kennedy and Dave McDonald. D. C. Kennedy attended as chairman of the joint committee of miners and operators.

Automobile Strike Threat.

Threat of a strike in automobile plants unless the Wagner labor relations bill or similar legislation is enacted was made before the Senate Labor Committee by Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer in the automobile industry. Dillon said the automobile workers would strike and take the rubber workers with them. Dillon has completed a strike vote among American Federation of Labor members in the industry.

A strike of rubber workers, which if prolonged would shut down automobile plants, appeared much more imminent than Dillon indicated. Acting independently of the automobile workers, rubber employes in the Goodyear plant at Akron will take a strike vote Sunday. Similar votes are expected to be taken in the Firestone and Goodrich plants before the end of the week. There are about 55,000 workers in the industry. The union organization claims a membership of 21,000. About 417,000 workers in the automobile and automobile parts industries would be affected by a shutdown.

The textile industry, which employs 400,000 workers, was seething with unrest and strike threats were frequent as a result of the recent NRA order cutting textile production 25 per cent. This, union officials contend, will cut the wages of some workers to as low as $8 a week.

Labor Board Action Opposed.

The textile workers also are aroused by the action of the Textile Labor Board in which it declined to order reinstatement of men who were not reemployed following the textile strike. The union has appealed the ruling to the National Labor Relations Board.

While Dillon appeared before the Senate Labor Committee in behalf of the Wagner bill, it was opposed by James L. Donnelly, vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

"This bill, contrary to what is fact, is predicated on the assumption that the employer is not the employe's best friend, but is the employe's enemy—is one who is not to be trusted by the employe, even in matters where the employe has confidence in his employer and desires to turn to his employer for counsel, advice, help or encouragement in his group activities," Donnelly said.

"The obvious purpose of this bill is to force the closed shop upon industry with the aid of Government compulsion.

"The bill is designed to confer special privileges exclusively on one group. The employer, the unorganized workers, the members of a minority union or of a plant employe representation group are given no protection.

"This bill would place a premium on strikes, nullify employes' contracts, destroy employe representation plans, force the closed shop upon employers, guarantee legal irresponsibility of labor organizers, provide for gag rule of industry, insure domination of labor boards by organized labor agents, provide for star chamber proceedings by labor boards and result in unlimited inquiries and investigations by Government agents and snoopers."

Before the Senate Finance Committee, investigating NRA, Thomas C. Blaisdell, director of the Consumers Division of the National Emergency Council, told of NRA benefits. He said, however, that during some of the later phases of NRA some restrictive provisions had been detrimental to consumers.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will testify today.

The one bright spot in the labor situation from the point of view of the workers was the fact that railroad union men will receive an $80,000,000 wage increase Monday. At that time the pay will be restored to the 1931 level, putting in effect a return of the last 5 per cent of a 10 per cent cut ordered in 1932. One-fourth of the cut was restored last July and one-fourth on January 1.

Richberg Confers on Walkout Threats

Strikers Accused in Bombing Of Judge's Daughter's Car

By the Associated Press.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa. March 28.—A bomb tonight wrecked the automobile of Miss Mary Valentine, daughter of Judge W. A. Valentine, as the car stood in the shopping district.

The outrage was attributed to mine-strike sympathizers, who resented Judge Valentine's recent act in sending 29 officers and members of the United Anthracite Miners to jail for contempt of court.

Two boys were injured by the blast, which sent hundreds of central city shoppers into panic. Hundreds of office clerks, quitting work for the day, likewise scurried for shelter as the bomb exploded with a roar heard for miles.

Two Newsboys Struck.

Miss Valentine, a city school teacher, drove to the Miners' National Bank Building at 4:30 to cash a check. She parked her car and entered the building. A moment later the machine was wrecked as the bomb went off. Two newsboys were struck by flying fragments of steel. A dozen windows in the bank were broken.

Police escorted Miss Valentine to her home, where she was guarded from questioners.

Authorities believed the bomb had been placed in the car, which bore a "judicial" license plate, to kill Judge Valentine.

For nearly two months the United Anthracite Miners, a new union, have been attempting to effect a strike at collieries of the Glen Alden Coal Co. The strikers have been opposed by the United Mine Workers of America, the recognized union.

Issued Injunction.

Several weeks ago, Judge Valentine issued an injunction ordering the new union to end the strike and to refrain from violence with miners on their way to work. There have been more than a score of dynamitings but today's bombing was the first directed against anyone other than a member of either union.

The new union's failure to end the strike resulted in Judge Valentine recently committing President Thomas Maloney and 28 of his followers to jail for contempt. Ninety-one additional miners are scheduled to appear before him next Wednesday on a similar contempt citation.

Johnson Plans Native's Return

Report General Will Run for Senate Against Gore Strengthened.

By the Associated Press.

Okmulgee, Okla., March 28.—Rumors Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA chief, will run for the United States Senate against T. P. Gore at the next election were strengthened today when he announced here he was "coming back to Oklahoma to live."

Gen. Johnson said he would make his home either in Tulsa or Oklahoma City.

He answered direct questions regarding his possible entry in the senatorial race with:

"The fact I am coming back to Oklahoma to live doesn't need to worry Senator Gore. I have been asked a hundred times if I planned to run for the Senate.

"My answer is still 'no' in that respect, but I reserve the right to change my mind any time I damn please."

The rumors linking Johnson with an Administration move to unseat Gore have been current for weeks.

One of the main points in the story that Johnson was to be a candidate to serve the dual purpose of ousting Gore and of providing President Roosevelt with a match for the rampant Huey Long, of Louisiana, was a report he would establish his residence in Oklahoma in time for the campaign.

The announcement today, made during a Rotary Club speech, bears out that part of the rumor.

$10,000 Suit Names Small Loans Firm

D. C. Man Charges Auto Was Seized Unlawfully.

Baldwin A. Hopkins, of Washington, yesterday filed suit for $10,000 damages against the United Small Loans Corporation of Silver Spring, Md., in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The plaintiff alleges the defendant firm seized, unlawfully, an automobile and personal property contained within the automobile from his locked garage.

He further contends that the seizure held him up as a person from whom it is difficult to collect debts and thus injured greatly his credit standing in his home community. Hopkins alleges that the auto was seized unlawfully after he had made proper payments on a note.

Compromises Made In Coal Field Strike

Concessions both to miners and companies in the Virginia anthracite coal field of southwest Virginia were made yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board in arbitrating a wage and hour dispute there, it was reported by the Associated Press.

The board denied a United Mine Workers' demand for reduction of hours from eight to seven, but increased wages 5 per cent for day work and yardage and 2 cents per ton for mining and loading. The increases are to be retroactive to April 1, 1934.

Clears Conscience of Peatnuts.

Shelby, Ohio (U.P.).—Five years ago a package of peanuts was stolen from W. W. Ellery's grocery here. A few days ago Ellery received a note explaining, "I stole some peanuts from you five years ago. Please accept this money—25 cents. God saved me and I wish to make everything right." The note was unsigned.

Closed Season On Trout Ends Sunday Night

Streams Well Stocked in Frederick County and Licenses Issued.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 28.—Newly stocked streams will greet fishermen from Frederick County and other sections when trout-fishing season, closed for nine months, opens again, Sunday midnight.

New consignments of brook trout were placed in Hunting and Fishing Creeks today by employes of State fish hatcheries. Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus and deputies are guarding streams to prevent violations of closed season, which lasts through Sunday. Phebus has stated that prospects for trout fishing are exceptionally good this year.

Trout Washed Away.

The loss by Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, of some 15,000 small trout, which were washed from his ponds near Catoctin Furnace in last December's floods, has been big gain for the fishermen at large, since practically all of the trout were believed to have been washed down into Hunting Creek, which leads from the ponds.

Meanwhile, according to Forest Warden William G. Renner, Richey's ponds were restocked and are expected to afford the usual excellent fishing to Richey and his guests during trout season.

1,500 Licenses Sold.

Approximately 1,500 fishing licenses had been sold by today at the office of clerk of court, and peak was not yet believed to have been reached. Demand usually is at its height in the half-day period on Saturday before the season begins.

Season for brook, brown and rainbow trout lasts until June 30. Reel limit is ten trout a day, and minimum size trout which may be caught and kept is of 7-inch length.

Dipnetting season, which opened February 15, has two and one-half more weeks to run, going out April 15. The bass season opens July 1 in Frederick County's nontidal rivers.

Two Announce For Dominion Senate Seats

Benjamin Muse, Publisher, and J. Kent Early Enter Races.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 28.—Two Virginians prominent in public affairs in their respective sections today announced their candidacies for the State Senate.

Benjamin Muse, Dinwiddie County publisher and former member of the United States Diplomatic Corps, said today he would oppose Robert Gilliam, incumbent, for the seat from the Eighth State senatorial district.

From Charlotte Courthouse came word that J. Kent Early, Commonwealth's attorney of Charlotte County for seven years, would seek election in the Eleventh District to succeed the late Samuel L. Ferguson, of Appomattox. The announcement of Mr. Early, former law partner of Circuit Judge Robert F. Hutcheson, followed the refusal of Mrs. Ferguson to accept Democratic leaders' offer of the nomination.

Mr. Muse's 14 years' service in the Diplomatic Corps included an assignment to accompany Secretary Hull as counselor of the American delegation to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo. He has an interest in the Southside Virginia News, a weekly, printed at Petersburg.

Jury Fails to Find Cause in Fatality

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 28.—The manner in which Emanuel ("Shorty") Roach, 42, Port Republic, Va., a track worker for the Norfolk & Western Railroad, met death near Charles Town on March 20, is still unsolved.

A coroner's jury called by Justice of the Peace T. C. Greene, after hearing testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Austin, supposedly the last persons to see Roach alive, returned a verdict late today of death from unknown causes.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Austin testified Roach fell to his death beneath the wheels of a moving camp car.

Chinese Probes Coed's Attack Upon Student

Friend of Shooting Victim in Oklahoma Hints Action by Consul.

By the Associated Press.

Tahlequah, Okla., March 28.—The spectacular shooting of a Chinese student at Northeastern Oklahoma Teachers College yesterday by a pretty 19-year-old co-ed, frantic at extortion threats, took on an international aspect tonight.

Albert Eng, Muskogee Chinese, said he would confer with Daniel Shaw, 27, who changed his name from George Hing Siew when he entered college, to determine whether official Chinese action shall be taken toward the filing of charges against the girl, dark-eyed Lois Thompson. She remained in jail tonight.

At Houston, Tex., the Chinese vice consul, Tsin Lon Quang, declined to comment.

While authorities pushed an unexplained search for "two men students and another co-ed," Shaw, wounded critically, told County Attorney Sanford Martin he could not account for the girl's attack. He was shot in the chest.

"The young lady called me out of the college administration building," he was quoted by Martin, "she asked me about extortion notes. Then she shot me."

Jack Horn, a student, told officers that Miss Thompson pursued the screaming Chinese across the campus, shooting and shouting:

"I know he's one of them and I'm going to kill him."

"The tragedy of it is," the prosecutor said, "that we have no information as yet which would indicate the Chinese is implicated in the plot."

He said Miss Thompson, a sophomore, daughter of a widow living two miles south of Cherokee, Okla., has received "10 or 12" extortion notes since February 27. The extortion demand started at $100, gradually increasing to $3,000.

Martin, apparently convinced the authors of the notes are students, questioned a number of persons tonight.

Man's Arm Broken By Electric Train

Collision Fails to Disturb Engineer at Glenn Dale.

Page A. DePriest has a broken arm and the dubious distinction of being the first man hurt in a collision with the Pennsylvania's new electric train.

DePriest, who is 23 and lives at Springfield, Md., was injured early yesterday at Glenn Dale, Md. Police said he apparently drove his car into the side of the train. The train did not stop, the engineer apparently being unaware of the collision.

The noise of the crash aroused H. A. Chisolm, who lived nearby. Chisolm and R. W. Suman, a neighbor, put DePriest into the Glenn Dale rescue squad's ambulance and the injured man was brought to Casualty Hospital here. His condition is not serious.

Man's Eye Is Removed After Blow by Golf Ball

Andrew S. Bain, 42, of Bethesda, Md., manager of James P. Marsh & Co., was recovering at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital yesterday after the removal of his right eye, which was injured Tuesday afternoon when he was struck by a sliced golf ball on the Burning Tree Course in nearby Maryland.

Both Bain and Walter Cunningham, the club professional, with whom he was playing at the time of the accident, refused to say who hit the ball. Bain's eyeball was ruptured. Dr. Charles M. Hammett performed the operation a few hours after the mishap.

2 Bandits Disarm Posse of 15, Climaxing Dixie Terror Reign

One of Men Fleeing After Bank Holdup Believed to Be Hamilton.

By the Associated Press.

Jackson, Miss., March 28.—Two bandits, one of whom was tentatively identified as the desperado Raymond Hamilton, climaxed a reign of terror tonight by holding up and disarming a posse of 15 as Mississippi National Guardsmen were mobilized to hunt them down.

The bandits started their mad dash through south Mississippi after robbing the Bank of Blountville at Prentiss this morning.

One woman was wounded, Sheriff Enis Crawford of Covington County was reported hurt slightly in a gun battle and numerous others were kidnaped in the trail of smoking guns.

The two men, speeding along country roads, surprised a posse of 15 men 12 miles north of Prentiss, took all their guns, kidnaped M. E. Smith, county farm agent, and forced him to drive them on in his car.

Deputy Sheriff W. J. Lee said after a pistol battle wtih the men that he had tentatively identified one of them by pictures as Raymond Hamilton, the No. 1 desperado of the Southwest.

After the posse was disarmed Jefferson Davis County requested Gov. Sennett Conner to mobilize militiamen. The Governor instructed Adjt. Gen. Thomas Grayson to call out the troops immediately.

Board of Trade Asks Stronger Traffic Bureau

Decentralization Opposed, More Officers Urged by Committee.

Proposed decentralization of the Metropolitan Police Department's Traffic Bureau was opposed by the traffic committee of the Board of Trade yesterday.

The committee, asked to consider a proposal for taking traffic regulation away from headquarters and placing it in charge of police precinct captains, adopted a resolution calling for increasing the authority of the central bureau and equipping it with additional traffic officers.

The decentralization proposal was made by several ranking police officials at the House District Committee's hearings recently.

The vote on the resolution to increase centralization of traffic regulation was taken after Capt. Milton Smith, assistant director of traffic, told the committee motorcycle patrolmen would become "messenger boys and errand boys" if assigned to precincts.

"This is a day of specialization," he said. "Traffic officers should be schooled for their job.

"They and their superiors, and they alone, should be responsible for enforcement; precinct captains haven't the time to give traffic the necessary attention."

Capt. Eugene F. Mitchell, closely associated for many years with the International Police Chief's Association, declared that under a system of decentralization "it's going to be easier to fix traffic violations."

On the motion of Maj. S. D. Ashford, the committee adopted a resolution proposing adjustment of traffic signals "considerably to speed up the average traffic speed."

A resolution approving widening of 20 streets and avenues proposed by the District Highway Department was approved. The action followed a report by C. Melvin Sharpe.

Firms Agree Not to Sell Champagne Erroneously

Two Washington concerns have agreed to discontinue the use of the word "champagne" to designate a beverage which is not champagne. The two, the Tower Pharmacy at Fourteenth and K streets northwest, and the Dixie Distributing Co. at Fifth and K streets northwest, sold "Pomagne," described as "the champagne of England."

This was announced by the Federal Trade Commission yesterday. The distributing company also agreed to cease using the word "vintage" so as to not tend to deceive buyers into believing the product is made from grapes.

Virginian Held After He Posed As U. S. Agent

Threatened to 'Clean Out' an NRA Office, Court Told; Calls it a 'Joke.'

Accused of representing himself as a Department of Justice agent and threatening to "clean out" a local NRA office, James W. Callan, 28, of Alexandria, Va., was held for grand jury action in Police Court yesterday on charges of impersonating an officer.

Callan, it was testified, approached Ralph Grayson, chief clerk, compliance division of NRA, in a fourth floor hallway of the Lenox Building. He allegedly told Grayson that he was an agent of the Department of Justice assigned to investigate the NRA.

After a brief conversation with Grayson, the court was told, Callan went into the NRA office where Misses Mary Pash and Rose McCormick were working. He told them also that he was a Federal agent, had just "cleaned out" an NRA office in Boston, Mass., and "was going to the same thing here." He then asked for data on a local automobile concern.

The young women said that Callan attempted to 'date" them and said he would return. He was arrested upon his return by a Third Precinct policeman secreted in the office.

Through his attorney, Miss Nita Hinman, Callan said "the whole thing was just a joke."

He was held in bond of $3,000.

Fowl Crime Is Staged In the Dead of Night

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., March 28.—E. Thurmand Boyd, Lynchburg attorney and chicken fancier, disposed of six of his finest barred rock hens and a rooster through a classified advertisement — but not exactly in the way he had hoped.

Deciding to break up his flock, Mr. Boyd advertised 10 for sale for breeding purposes, listing his telephone number. He got response from a caller who questioned him as to where he lived, the type of chickens he had, their size and so forth.

That night the prospective buyer called, but while Mr. Boyd was asleep. The attorney went out the next morning and found seven prizes, including the headman, gone from the roost. Scattered feathers told the story.

Prince William Charges Three With Robbery

Crates of Chickens Valued at $200, Tossed From Truck Near Dumfries.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 28.—Arrested on charges of highway robbery, three Prince William County men were placed in jail at Manassas early today. Their arrest by State Officer Sam Sneed came after they were alleged to have boarded a northbound produce truck on the Richmond-Washington highway near Dumfries about 1 a. m. today and thrown off 11 crates of chickens.

A taxicab driver called Officer Sneed after he had seen three men board a North Carolina truck as it was pulling a steep grade near Dumfries and throw off crates of chickens valued at $200. The men jumped from the truck as it picked up speed and disappeared into the woods.

In a short time afterward Officer Sneed arrested Gilbert Kinchloe, 28, Harold Liming, 24, and Leonard Taylor, 35, all of Dumfries, in the woods near the place where the cab driver said the highwaymen disappeared. They will be tried before Justice Brown at Manassas within the next ten days.

Officer Sneed said this afternoon that one of the men had admitted taking part in the robbery.

All of the crates with exception of three were recovered from the roadside where they had been thrown.

The truck, en route from North Carolina to Washington markets, carried a cargo valued at $500.

Fried Oysters Cost Him $250.

Toronto, Ont. (U.P.).—Because Henry James ordered his oysters fried instead of raw he lost $250 here recently. While eating the meal he discovered five pearls. The value of the find would have been $250, a jeweler estimated, if the oysters had been uncooked. The pearls were ruined by the cooking.

Officers to Draft Battle Plan Today

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 28.—Definite arrangements for the military maneuvers of the "Second Battle of Chancellorsville" will be made tomorrow by officers of the United States Marine Corps under Brig. Gen. Lyman and local members of the battlefield park committee, in charge of the celebration to be held at Chancellorsville May 2.

A group of marine officers will spend several hours inspecting the terrain and making plans for the movement of troops that will reenact the original battle of May 2, 1863, when the Southern forces under Gen. Robert E. Lee inflicted a crushing defeat to Gen. Joseph E. Hooker's Union Army.

The chief address will be delivered by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, Richmond historian. The program includes a sham battle between the Virginia Military Institute Corps of Cadets, representing the Confederates, and 650 Marines, representing the Union Army.

D. C. Liquor Smuggling Suspect Surrenders

Petersburg, Va., March 27 (AP).—John Phillips, indicted in Washington yesterday by a Federal grand jury on a charge of conspiring to smuggle illegal whisky into the Capital, surrendered to United States Commissioner J. T. O'Farrell here late today. He posted a $5,000 bond for appearance before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Monady.

Phillips, an auto dealer, said he saw in the newspaper that he was wanted in the Capital, but said he was innocent. He was not arraigned, but was allowed to post bond.

Union Aid's Effigy Hanged in Staunton

Sign on Dummy Bears Samuel Collins' Name.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., March 28.—An effigy of Samuel J. Collins, Staunton architect and labor union advocate, was hanged here last night from a tree on municipal property near the firehouse.

City officials ordered the dummy removed several hours after it had been discovered and after it had been viewed by hundreds of persons. The dummy carried a large hand-lettered placard bearing the name, "Sam Collins."

The incident was an outgrowth of the strife which has occurred here over the proposed unionization of the Staunton plants of L. Greif & Brothers, Inc., Baltimore clothing manufacturers.

Mr. Collins has sided with the union minority, which has been barred from entering the mills by a majority of employes opposed to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He accompanied a Staunton delegation of union workers to a recent hearing in Baltimore before the Federal Regional Relations Board, and spoke in their behalf.

A Positive Move.

The enthusiasm aroused by the plan of Middle Western Republicans to hold an exploratory conference of itself suggests the magnitude of the reorganization problem confronting the G. O. P. None has as yet a very clear idea of what this gathering can accomplish. Yet Republicans of varying viewpoints indorse it as a sign of recovery from the present moribund condition of their party. When so much interest is manifested in a regional convention hostile criticism will argue that the party is catching at every straw.

On the other hand, the very disorganization of the Republican Party makes it probable that the proposed convention will attain more than regional significance. If the Mid-Western movement should succeed in drafting and approving an impressive declaration, it might well become the fulcrum upon which a revitalized party could be built.

The most promising aspect of the Mid-Western movement is the serious attempt of Gov. Landon, William Allen White and their associates to evolve a positive Republican program. It is possible, of course, that the G. O. P. might win its way back to power merely by criticism of the New Deal. But such negative tactics would invite another step down the descending spiral from democracy to dictatorship. Democratic government will not survive periods of social upheaval if elections are made to turn upon the blunders of the "ins" without critical consideration of the policies, if any, of the "outs."

The Republican Party has an opportunity for national service, therefore, closely commensurate with the ability of its leaders to work out a practical program which actually grapples with the momentous issues of the day. If the Mid-Western conference measures up to this responsibility it may indeed prove a significant event.

Symbolic Appointment.

The appointment of John Buchan as Governor General of Canada does not begin a new epoch in the relations of Great Britain and the self-governing Dominions. It is, rather, a tacit recognition of the steady evolution whereby the British Empire is being transformed into the British Commonwealth of Nations. Whatever the legal fiction regarding Canada's place in the British family, she is now, in fact, no longer a ward that asks protection or accepts supervision. She is a sister nation.

Successful soldiers were England's first governors general for the northern half of North America. Eminent statesmen—or as nearly eminent statesmen as could be found—followed. Their position, if largely ornamental, was none the less a position in loco parentis. Kings' uncles and relatives-in-law were dispatched across the Atlantic as the crown's representatives—to preserve good will.

But plain Mr. Buchan is essentially a literary man. Famous as a historian he is none the less primarily a novelist. In style an inheritor of the Stevensonian tradition, he is indeed, most popular as an author of first-rate "thrillers." And he is, above all, a likable human being.

In the relations of Britain with Canada the office of imperial proconsul has long been an anachronism. The establishment of a Canadian Minister at Washington said as much soon after the war. The appointment of John Buchan as "governor general" is symbolic of the displacement of colonial relationships by cultural relationships within the empire.

For Valor.

It is heartening as the world peers into a dark and awful future to consider the simple ceremony at which Gen. Greely received the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The story of his achievements in the Arctic has been told and re-told. The whole world knows of how the young lieutenant and his command of 25 were marooned on Cape Sabine in 1881 when a relief ship failed to reach them. They stretched six weeks' food supply over nine months and were rescued 42 hours after the last bit had been eaten, but not before 18 of the band had succumbed to cold and hunger. The entire country thrilled to the leader's announcement on returning to civilization that they had penetrated farther north than any before them. Not so generally known is his service in the construction of telegraph lines and cables in Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Philippines and Alaska. Nor is it commonly remembered that army aviation received its first stimulus under him, for it was due to his vision and efforts that a Government appropriation was obtained for the construction of Prof. Langley's machine.

In presenting the medal to the venerable old soldier, the Secretary of War said that Congress made the award as a tribute to his "long life of distinguished public service." Clearly, it was the essentially non-military aspects of his record that earned him this highest of military honors. That the Nation can recognize and will acknowledge valor and devotion to duty in fields other than that of slaughter will in some measure reassure those who decry what they conceive to be a growing cult of foreboding Prussianism throughout the world.

Problems Of A Neutral.

To preserve our neutrality in the event of war in Europe or the Orient, Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, is favoring legislation imposing a mandatory embargo upon the export of munitions and prohibiting loans to all belligerents. Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the former War Industries Board, similarly advocates the withdrawal of governmental protection from nationals who enter the zone of hostilities, presumably on sea or land. These recommendations raise squarely the question as to how far the United States would be prepared to surrender trading privileges, heretofore regarded by us as unquestionably legitimate, in order to safeguard a proclaimed neutrality.

Certainly, our attempts to protect American property from search and possible seizure as contraband would be as futile as during the last great war, unless we were prepared to intervene actively to defend our alleged rights. On the other hand, a simple declaration that no attempt would be made to protect our citizens in "the trouble zone" would not of itself provide guarantees against our becoming involved in disputes with the belligerents. Violent encounters, resulting in loss of American lives or extensive destruction of American property on the high seas, for instance, would inflame public sentiment and might lead to war in defiance of the most solemn congressional declarations.

For such reasons, it is increasingly argued that the only way to insure neutrality is to sever all trading relations with belligerents. Such an uncompromising policy would encounter determined domestic opposition, since it would entail not only a sacrifice of the prospective profits of wartime trading, but would also threaten a loss of normal peace-time returns. Furthermore, a policy that might necessitate cutting off a large proportion of our overseas commerce at a moment's notice would be hard to reconcile with the current efforts of the State Department to expand foreign trade through negotiation of reciprocal tariff agreements.

To the extent that such efforts succeed, orders to suspend all trading with countries that provide outlets for our surplus products would add to the hardships of domestic business and aggravate unemployment in exporting industries. The greater the importance of the interests thus affected, the more irresistible would become the political pressure to modify non-intercourse policies applied at the outbreak of a war among other nations.

If the United States wishes to remain aloof from further possible world conflicts, it is necessary to consider various complicated problems that once had little, if any, bearing upon our neutral status. Insistence upon a conception of neutral rights, first asserted under conditions radically different from those that now prevail, is practically meaningless. Today, the export of foodstuffs to a belligerent may be a greater aid to a combatant state than shipments of munitions. And profits obtained by American farmers through sales of foodstuffs to countries at war may bulk larger than those obtained by sales of munitions.

As a result it has become impossible to draw a clear line of distinction between exports which are and are not properly contraband. Some pessimists are for that reason disposed to believe that the United States can not escape being involved in any great war of the future. Certainly our chances of escape are small unless we are prepared to develop a protective policy in advance of the outbreak of hostilities.

The State Department has been studying the neutrality problem for almost a year and will doubtless soon be prepared to make suggestions. As Charles Warren says, however, in an article in the current Yale Review, "preparing the way for neutrality is not a matter merely for the Government or for the President. It is now incumbent on the American people to prepare themselves, individually, to comprehend the new conditions of warfare and the relations of civil populations to the conduct of warfare, and to readjust their whole point of view as to their own rights and acts as neutrals."

Paying The Piper.

With less than four days remaining in which to pay the first installment of New York City's 2 per cent retail sales tax, only 16,000 of the 188,000 registered retailers had made returns. The delay seems due not so much to procrastination as to widespread disaffection, which in some localities threatens to develop into a taxpayers' revolt. Certain stores in Brooklyn, for instance, are displaying "tax strike" signs.

The resentment of the retailers is attributed in part to the fact that proceeds of relief taxes (of which the retail sales tax is the chief), are to be used to finance recently voted increases in salaries paid to employes of the local relief administration. The total sum involved is relatively small. It may well be that the increases have been welcomed by some as a pretext for withholding sums collected from the public for transmission to the city. Nevertheless, the incident is significant evidence of the restiveness of taxpayers under the growing burdens imposed upon them. The fact that the tax in this case is indirect, and is presumably shifted to the public, does not make it a painless imposition. It entails labor and expense on the part of the stores and, of course, tends to reduce the volume of their business.

Another feature of the threatened strike worth noting is the evidence of a growing concern about the disposition made of the taxpayers' money. The increases in New York City may or may not have been reasonable, but in any case the retailers are entitled to an explanation which will enable them to determine that for themselves. If they are led to believe that taxes to relieve destitution are being dissipated by extravagance or mismanagement, their resentment is easy to understand.

The New York "tax strike" may serve a useful purpose, therefore, in forcing home to the country as a whole the lesson that it is far easier to vote huge appropriations than it is to collect the funds out of which, sooner or later, spendthrift financing must be covered.

Exposing The Weak Spots.

Testimony heard during the last two days by the House District Crime Committee has touched some of the vital law enforcement problems. Beside the intricate responsibility of judiciously handling thousands of cases every month, police "tip-offs" and "ticket fixing" are relatively insignificant. As the committee's hearings draw to a close it may well concentrate all of its attention upon the major question of adequate, thorough but impartial prosecution.

Those who have followed the hearings from beginning to end must be impressed with the vast difference between the testimony of Corporation Counsel Prettyman and United States Attorney Garnett. The former has made a careful study of "defects" in the prosecution system. He has presented for the consideration of Congress a rather elaborate plan to relieve the pressure upon judges in the lower courts, where more than 1,000 cases are initiated every week. Apparently Mr. Prettyman is fully aware of the responsibility devolving upon him as an important link in the chain of law enforcement.

In contrast with this attitude Mr. Garnett had few, if any, constructive suggestions to make. He admitted that he does not go into the Police Court at all, and manifested a startling lack of information about the work which goes on under his jurisdiction. Instead of cooperating with the committee in the development of more effective ways and means to combat lawlessness, Mr. Garnett took the attitude that the investigators were persecuting him.

It is not surprising, therefore, if citizens' associations and business groups are, in effect, demanding Mr. Garnett's resignation. His own testimony before the committee shows that his office is one of the weakest points in the law enforcement system.

"Honorable" Intentions.

There is something a little amusing in the idea of a Japanese whose hobby is photographing colonial architecture and sites which are the pride of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Irony creeps in when the mild little foreigner is taken into custody on suspicion of being an international spy taking pictures of "strategic points."

Nakajiro Watanabe, a chauffeur living at Mount Holly, N. J., was accustomed to amusing himself on his afternoons off by snapping venerable trees, old-fashioned formal gardens, and other early Americana. On such an outing this week he was taken to headquarters for questioning by an overzealous officer of the law, who said he had been reading in the papers of the menace of spying Japanese photographers. Explanations were offered and substantiated by the negatives in the camera which, after being developed, revealed weeping willows and white-columned homes instead of the suspected aqueducts and munitions plants.

The sergeant was only, as he thought, doing his duty. One can easily imagine his vision of capturing an international spy. On the other hand, even hard-boiled policemen should not forget that this is spring. And in the spring a young man's fancy is just as apt to turn to thoughts of photography as to any other form of outdoor sport.

One wonders just how another Japanese, immortalized by the pen of Will Irwin, would have dealt with the situation. With brush in hand, he would probably have written a bread-and-butter note to the policeman, thanking him for his honorable hospitality. And, with tongue in cheek, it is practically certain that he would have ended it by saying, "My honorable arrest was most ridiculous, hoping you are the same, Hashimura Togo."

"Men judge women by the things they refrain from saying," asserts a writer. With so little to base our judgment on, no wonder we can't understand 'em.

So Please File, In Hope.

Kansas City Times.

Various proposals affecting the League of Nations, the pact of Paris, international currencies, tariffs, debts and other matters have been approved unanimously by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's unofficial ten-power conference in London, and the doctor says it's "the first time since the war that such a representative body of men was able to agree on anything." That is progress; but, unfortunately, it is unofficial progress. In fact, it is progress only to the resolution stage. And what ocean would be big enough to float the resolutions that have been adopted since the war?

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Promotion of Tranquillity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The colored people of this community and throughout the country have cause to appreciate keenly the stand of The Washington Post in a recent editorial on the Harlem riots.

Benevolence has always been less costly than vindictiveness, education by and large far more efficacious for the commonweal than repression or punishment and cooperation more respectable, less revolting, less savage than extermination. Moreover, it is feasible. Every interest of the Negro element in America is ineradicably grounded on the side of law and order. Every Negro knows, if he knows anything at all, that for him life, liberty and pursuit of happiness rate just so much as the sanctity of the Constitution—no more, no less. Herein is his Rock of Ages, all else is the deep, deep sea. All the sentiment of his nature centers in this, his native land. He knows no other, loves no other, looks to no other.

True, there are those who with less vision, faith and hope, facing the adamantine wall of Nordic prejudice, are ready to "shuffle along" anywhere out of their despair. But Africa is no solution. It can not be denied that there is material here, and even if we, on account of the insurmountable differences in pigmentation or other cellular variations from the preferred norm, are unable to rise to a standard of Christian brotherhood, we can at least find common ground for honest and honorable cooperation for the good of all concerned in the promotion of justice and domestic tranquillity.

"People Will Gamble."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The House of Representatives of the State of Maine, in passing a pension lottery bill, evinces a sense of realism, although such proposals will alarm our hypocritical populace.

Nearly every one in the United States of America indulges in gambling of one sort or another. Refer to the statistics relative to the amount risked daily by those who seek a great deal for little and you will have to admit that the country regards this question in much the same manner that it did prohibition. Sweepstakes, national horse and dog racing, the numbers racket and numerous other forms, including the little friendly (?) poker game, are just a few of the ways and means to financial affluence.

Why not remove the mask? Why not face reality and appease the apparent natural desire for that form of diversion? People will gamble because it satisfies an urge. Let them be themselves, but let the State take the "percentage" instead of permitting an irresponsible element to benefit. The proceeds could be applied to pension funds, hospitals (as in Latin America), orphanages and similar useful quasi-public institutions. The first lighthouse off Newport, R. I., was built from funds obtained through a lottery. Even the Puritans of that day thought it reasonable!

District Suffrage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: John J. Rothermel's recent letter protesting District tyranny suffered at the hands of members of the appropriations sub-committee strikes a sympathetic note in the breasts of all residents of "No Man's Land."

Coming from such an eminent scientist and citizen who has devoted his life unselfishly to public education, his words bear especial weight.

It is obvious that the District will never get a square deal until the voteless wards (classed with Indians and imbeciles) are given the ballot.

Let Dr. Rothermel and other intelligent citizens get behind the movement to secure suffrage for the District. TAXPAYER.

The Joke Was On Us.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The joke you refer to is on you; the hope you cherish, forlorn. Aeschylus erred in locating Arabia in the region of the Caucasus; Shakespeare erred in giving a seaport to Bohemia; verily, with all their genius, they could not err as egregiously as you did Tuesday in your attributions to me in the editorial entitled, "Syncopated Wordsworth."

I thank you for giving peace to Wordsworth's ghost, for his spirit must have suffered a sort of crucifixion. No combination of consonants and thundering vowels can adequately anathematize him who purposely martyrs unblemished English. He who could so do would express the colors from the rainbow.

Now, Mr. Editor, your representative who chatted with me on the subject of the Department of Justice Building inscriptions is a gentleman and a scholar; and, as we grazed also in the meadow of religion, he may have thought, when I casually and correctly quoted Wordsworth, that I was quoting Wordsworth the theologian. In fact, your representative today acknowledged not only as of courtesy, verily as of right, that the misquotation was unjustly attributed to me. Homer had some considerable reputation as a reporter, and he, too, was not infallible and had occasionally to nod.

"Come, come! Mr. Conn. And you a 'poet.'"

A rhymist, Mr. Editor, a modest ryhmist only, sir, who was first nominated "poet" by your representative, and who is pleased with the humorous impeachment.

No, Mr. Editor, this humble soul is not "all worked up," as you affirm, by "the inanities of most" of the legends on public edifices, and the report you misquote does not justify such a statement. There is pleasure in glimpsing the skiey summits of the Alps of thought and wisdom. Such should inscriptions be.

Nor, Mr. Editor, did your representative report that I said "the Constitution itself mentions at least six other major concerns of humanity." The report accurately quotes me as saying, "There are many things of interest to humanity, that six are enumerated in the preamble to the Constitution." My comment was that the inscription excluded all separate interests, including religion, man's mission and eternal destiny by seeming to make Mosaism superior to Christianity; not, as a poet might have said, that I love the law-giver less, verily that I love the Messiah more.

Ponder, Mr. Editor, upon the following; the words are Addison's:

> As a foreigner is very apt to conceive an idea of the ignorance or politeness of a nation from the turn of their public monuments and inscriptions, they should be submitted to the perusal of men of learning and genius before they are put in execution.

That, sir, was the policy of President Wilson, who redacted and improved the inscriptions composed by President Eliot for the Union Station, who was competent to pile perfection upon perfection in his wizardry with the English language.

I believe, Mr. Editor, you will approve of the comments I make on these legends transcribed from the Department of Justice Building.

"No free government can survive that is not based on the supremacy of law."

Specious, as the saying is even stronger, a universal, with the most significant adjective "free" deleted.

"Where the law ends, tyranny begins." The antithesis of law is anarchy, not despotism, which applies the most rigid and arbitrary sort of law known.

"Law alone can give us freedom."

We achieved our freedom by defeating the law under which the colonies subsisted, and years later the Republic's founders, when freedom had been already realized—not independence only—formulated and proclaimed the new Nation's fundamental law. Justice, which the United States Supreme Court recognizes as sometimes transcending the law, describes itself as "Justice the Guardian of Liberty," which the law is purposed to subserve.

"Above all statues is the figure of justice."

Above all, in these United States, excepting only representations of the Godhead, is the Statue of Liberty, which is equivalent to saying the personification of the state, among whose prime and vital attributes is justice.

I thank you, Mr. Editor. The lex talionis is not agreeable, though to break a playful lance with you has been a pleasure.

EDWARD CONN.
Washington, March 26.

A Pact To Preserve.

Pan-American Day, April 15, will be celebrated by the signing of the Roerich pact guaranteeing the protection of artistic and scientific institutions and historic monuments.

This treaty, born at the Montevideo conference, seeks to preserve the cultural treasures of humanity within the borders of the signatory nations through peace and war—in peace time by protective legislation, and in wartime by recognizing all such monuments and institutions as neutral territory.

The government of Honduras has accepted the treaty. The governments of Brazil, Ecuador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Panama, United States and Uruguay have received plenary powers to subscribe.

It is a gentlemen's agreement which no civilized nation should hesitate to ratify.

The Post Impressionist

Neither Did We Write It!

Post Office, Friday.

AFTER THIS, communications to the Column must carry a convincing name. We don't much care whether it is a real name or not, so long as it looks like a name and not a bluff. The Post-Impressionist is weary of publishing ironic bits, and then being bitten for them—tired of using controversial contributions signed "Citizen" or "Pro Bono Publico," and then being brought to task as their author.

* * *

Here is a case—positively the last!—in point. A while ago we received from Alexandria (and duly printed) a piece on Malthusianism to which the writer would allow us to append merely the signafure, "Clerk."

Now read one of the results!

It, too, is postmarked "Alexandria." And it runs as follows.

Dear Sir:

Judging by your title, you are closely related to the cubists, the dadists, the nudists and pessimists. Your grandmother was probably the reincarnation of a Post-Salvadore-Dali-Gertrude Stein complex.

Now, don't bother to tell me you don't have a complex and are not neurotic. You couldn't write with lucidity if you were not neurotic—either lucidity or Sadie Blake; it makes no difference to me.

Anyway, tewhellwit your impressions! You let a lot of people influence you. You let people muscle into your Column and say things. They say things you won't even think about. You get away with murder—at least, you get away with a lot of crimes as bad as murder.

* * *

After all, what's a murder?—What's a columnist?

You start things—and let other people finish them—that is, you start things that other people have to finish if they get finished. You get ideas like Sherwood Anderson—like a babe in the woods. You get to wandering in your typewriter and hope Sadie Blake or Ada Doomity will bring you back while you remain silent and think up other things to get lost about.

* * *

So you cause people trouble, and people talk about you. They even write letters to you!

* * *

You probably feel sometimes like Miss Lonelyhearts—only you're not. At least, I hope you're not.

About that "clerk" here in Alexandria who wrote to you the other day on the popular problem of population. ("Alliteration's artful aid!"):

There might be a clerk in Alexandria. There might be two clerks in Alexandria. But I refuse to believe there's a clerk in Alexandria who writes like you quote this fellow as writing.

First: If he could write that way, he wouldn't be a clerk.

Second: He wouldn't be in Alexandria.

Anyway, I don't like it! A neighbor accused me of having composed that clerk's tirade!

* * *

Over the phone, she says to me: "So you're a clerk now?"—Evilly speaking, as it was.

"So what?" I says. "I'm not a clerk."

She titters doubtfully. "In the Post-Impressionist Column," she explains.

"Oh, THAT?" I says. "I glanced at it, but I saw something about 'Alexandrine,' so I thought it was something about Egypt or French verse—and didn't read it."

"Hell!" she says—and hangs up.

"Numbuh, pul-leeze?" says the operator.

"I didn't write it!" I says—a bit tenaciously.

"What numbuh do you want, pul-leeze?" says that operator.

"Listen, pal," I says: "No matter what you think, I didn't write that clerk-thing about population!"

There was only a faint, far-away buzzing over the 'phone, and some vague evidence of a distant radio . . . The buzzing became louder, and the radio became fainter.

"Well," I says, "take your old radio—it wasn't a good program noway."

I hung up.

* * *

Anyhow, if you start things in your Column, you had ought to finish them, and not incite people to mutual insults—saying with malicious intent:

"I seen you in the Post-Impressionist Column the other morning."

I reply to them: "Yeh? It's too bad your old man drinks like a fish an' your uncle ain't out of Sing Sing yet."

So they give me the glassy stare like a cow what swallowed a bee. And I make a getaway.

You gotta be hard with 'em when they accuse you of things you don't do—like writing to the Post-Impressionist about population.

* * *

Phooie for the population! I don't even see them. May all their children be Post-Impressionists!

JAMES HARRISON.

Italy's Reconciliation With Yugoslavs Hailed

New Minister Announces Mussolini Has No Ambitions Across Adriatic Sea.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WITH a friendly hand stretched over the Adriatic Sea, which he long regarded as an "Italian lake," Premier Mussolini the other day, in one of the most far-reaching about faces of post-war diplomacy, made peace with Yugoslavia. Coming as it did, after the Greek revolution had petered out and at a time when Germany's rearmament is causing deep anxiety in Rome, Italy's gesture may mean a complete change in her attitude of the past 15 years, the importance of which can not be overemphasized.

In presenting his credentials to the regent, Prince Paul, the new Italian Minister to Yugoslavia, Count Guido di Campoalto, formally declared in Il Duce's behalf that Italy had no territorial ambition in Yugoslavia.

"Italy has no intention of disturbing either Yugoslavia's development or territorial integrity," he said. "On the contrary, it desires concrete and cordial relations in political and economic spheres."

Deliveries of credentials in Belgrade have been speechless performances since the war. So, the Italian Minister's address, which was warmly answered by the regent prince, was in itself an exception in the Yugoslavian protocol. But it was much more than that.

Ever since the London Treaty of 1915, Italy has looked daggers at Yugoslavia. By that treaty, the allies induced Italy to join them by promising her, in case of victory, colonial advantages in Africa and territorial gains along the Adriatic Sea, on the Dalmatian Coast. When the victors shared the pie, there is no denying that the London Treaty was not loyally executed, even though the African advantages now seem to be forthcoming.

• • • •

IT MAY be a good thing that the Dalmatian Coast, now an integral part of Yugoslavia, was not given to Italy because the creation of a sort of path of Italian territory along the Adriatic would certainly have caused endless complications.

Nevertheless, Italy deeply resented the fact that the London Treaty was not respected. The creation just across the sea of expansive Yugoslavia, with her 14,500,000 inhabitants, made her mad. An Italian expedition, commanded by the poet-flier Gabriele d'Anunzio, snatched Fiume, a Yugoslav port, and kept it. Dalmatian dreams were not put under the pillow. Yugoslavia became the enemy.

Since then, tension between the two countries has never ceased, often reaching the point where sparks flew in all directions. Last July, when Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated and both nations sent troops to their frontiers to prevent the Nazi putsch in Austria, diplomatic circles in Europe feared Italian and Yugoslavian soldiers might clash on Austrian soil.

Italy looked unfavorably upon the Little Entente which brought Yugoslavia the support of Rumania and Czechoslovakia. Nor did she like the Balkan pact of February, 1934, which linked Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey.

• • • •

IL DUCE'S game in central and southeastern Europe was to play the Hungarian and Bulgarian pawns and to encourage Hungarian revisionism. This lasted until the growing danger of a German raid in Austria provided Italy and France with a common ground on which to stage a rapprochement.

A better understanding between Italy and Yugoslavia and an official recognition by Italy of her neighbor's territorial integrity was regarded by Louis Barthou, the late French foreign minister, as the corner stone of Franco-Italian amity. He was murdered at Marseilles, together with King Alexander of Yugoslavia, before bringing his plan to completion.

The part played by Italy in the recent Greek insurrection is not quite clear. Many political observers in Paris contend that it was Italy's last attempt to wreck the Balkan entente which stood in her way in that part of Europe.

M. Venizelos, who is pro-Italy, is said to have always been opposed to the Balkan pact, and, had he succeeded in his coup d'etat, Greece would have withdrawn from the Balkan Entente, thus bringing it to an end.

The contention that Venizelos was supported by Mussolini's government is upheld by the fact that, a week before the Greek revolution broke out, on February 20, Italy made overtures to the Turkish and Greek governments for a tripartite accord. They were turned down.

Whether this be true or not, the interesting conclusion for Europe is that, a few days after fears of a blaze in the Balkans, Signor Mussolini has made a most friendly and pacific gesture toward his old opponent, Yugoslavia. Further developments are said to be in the air, including a commercial and a political treaty, which would be signed in Rome next month by Il Duce and the Yugoslav premier, Yevtitch.

• • • •

ALL this, together with the declaration of the Italian minister in Belgrade, clearly indicates that Italian claims over "irredente" Dalmatia are definitely discarded. It also means that Italy no longer backs Hungary's revisionism or the latter's hope to see a Croatian state more or less independent from Yugoslavia.

Does it also show a gradual return to certain prewar conceptions of the Italian diplomacy which, during the Austro-Serbian incidents of 1908 and 1913, caused Marchese di San Giuliani to adopt a pro-Serbian attitude? It seems that then, as now, Italy began to realize the eventual danger of Pan-Germanism.

The Italo-Yugoslav rapprochement will probably be of vital importance for the completion of the Rome accord laid down last January by France and Italy and which is still rather vague. The project of a general agreement, to be signed by all the neighbors of Austria, called for the guarantee of Austrian independence and a pledge by all the signatories not to interfere with each other's territorial integrity.

• • • •

SHOULD Mussolini actually embark upon a policy of friendly cooperation with the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente, nothing could do more for the furtherance of the recent Franco-Italian rapprochement. In fact, it seems France and Italy are on a sort of diplomatic honeymoon.

The French seem determined to make the most of the new Italian disposition toward their policy in Central Europe. They, too, have just sent a new minister to Yugoslavia. And no better man could they choose for their purpose than Count de Dampierre, who has been counselor at the French Embassy in Rome for the last eight years. An active collaborator of Count de Chambrun, the present French ambassador in Rome, a stanch believer in Franco-Italian friendship, Count de Dampierre knows Italy and Mussolini as well as any man. He is sure to be active in the promotion of better relations between Italy and Yugoslavia.

And last among the roses France and Italy are offering each other, Paris is now getting ready to name one of its streets after "Vittorio-Veneto," the final Italian victory during the World War.

Undergrad Humor

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE Authors Club of England, of which I am a member, held a meeting recently at which university journalism was the main subject for discussion. A student from Oxford and a student from Cambridge spoke. They were both editors of university papers.

In what they said of college humor, and its place in college journalism, they might have been speaking of many American college papers, which have become intensely serious in their editorials and general discussions. The Cambridge student made the excellent point that confidence in one form or another is absolutely essential in humor. He said years ago the college papers were filled with the spirit of boisterous fun, the natural ebullition of care-free youth.

• • • •

But as most of the undergraduates now in college were war babies and were now living in a period of world depression, this old spirit of boisterous humor had, to a large extent, departed. What humor they had was a humor born largely of bitterness. The students were satirical and ill tempered in their writing, and were afraid to play the fool. In the old days, he said, they published articles of glorious nonsense. There was one on the transatlantic swimming contest, which brought congratulatory messages from Woodrow Wilson and Lloyd George.

Now they are suffering from a nervous affliction, as shown by the fact that they had got a course in Buchanism in religion and Communism in economics.

• • • •

But surely the final remark of the youth from Cambridge shows that humor in his university is not dead. He said, "the most humorous side of university journalism was the business part of it."

The Oxford youth said that the one strong feature of his paper was that it had succeeded in getting itself universally hated. He thought this was a good sign. As soon as his paper found out how much it was hated, it set out to encourage and increase this hatred as much as possible, because he thought the more it was hated the more it would be read.

He wound up by saying that perhaps Oxford was more sophisticated and decadent than Cambridge, but it was nearer the truth. This remark also indicates that the undergraduate sense of humor is not dead.

Fine Wheat Crop Expected in County

Heavy Maryland Snows Aid Grain.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 28.—The finest wheat crop in years is in prospect in Washington County this year, according to a survey made by J. A. Miller, Keedysville, reporter for the United States Department of Agriculture.

The winter with heavy snows during the sub-zero weather which acted as a blanket for the grain has been ideal, he said.

Pear buds are beginning to swell, but other fruit buds are still dormant and are in no danger of early frosts.

Many farmers are already plowing and hundreds of acres of truck land has already been planted in potatoes.

No End of Books

"The Little Candle's Beam," Isa Glenn's Tart Novel of Cave-Dwelling Washington.

By Theodore Hall.

I'M about ready to go lobbying for a law which will prohibit stupid heroines. Literary purists, with whom I don't hold much truck, argue that stupid people exist in nature—hence they are material for novels. All I can say is that most of us try to avoid them in nature. A book, coming to us with the duties of a guest, ought to have a little consideration.

My irritation is owing, no doubt, to the fact that Isa Glenn does altogether too good a job at making us writhe over the stupidity and spinelessness of her heroine. Cecilia Tabor Masefield, young Washington widow, flops over the landscape from beginning to end of Miss Glenn's latest novel, "The Little Candle's Beam" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50)—and I for one felt like getting out the hickory switch. True, it's her heredity, character, and all that. yet scarcely once does she speak out her mind, or take a decisive step of her own, or do anything else of the sort which the most deterministic among us would think likely from sheer numerical probability. But there—I'd better tell you what Cecilia had got into.

• • • •

HER mother, Mrs. Tabor, is as cool, firm-chinned, and unpleasant an old lady as you could imagine from Dupont to Thomas Circle. Wanting sons, she had two daughters. Phoebe inherited the chin, married twice, and radiated managerial airs. Cecilia, delicate, lovely, and essentially elegant, was left with a principle faculty of becoming muddled and a corollary ability to suffer like a little pink mouse caught in a trap. She married a State Department man because she admired his clothes and his dancing—Quarles Masefield did the waltz as well as anybody who ever heard Bernstein play "Driga's Serenade" out at the Chevy Chase Club. Then, 12 years later, Quarles died and left her with no money and an independent-minded young son, Tommy.

Now Mrs. Tabor kept the purse strings, despised Cecilia, and disliked Tommy whole-heartedly. And Cecilia adored Tommy with devouring maternity. Only when he was affected did she fight. So, nerves fraying in the Tabor house, she got out, took a job narrating society gossip over the radio, and began to face the world.

Unkindly, it started to attack her on all sides. When she found she loved dark, burly Alfred Orme, when she heard him urge her to marriage, then the fact of Tommy in the world—not to mention Tommy's outspoken objections to Orme—pushed her back. Instead, she asked Orme to be her lover. Nor was that an arrangement to solve things.

Tommy's growing up and falling in love with the daughter of her best friend meant more torture for Cecilia. It was rivalry, and she was out to hold Tommy. Petting him, bedearing him, all she accomplished was to push him toward the competent young red head. When in an excess of maternal protectiveness, she jumped between him and a taxi, Cecilia had to have her foot amputated. That, she knows, ends Orme. It seems as if, lying in the hospital bed, she is about to grow up and learn to assert herself. Then the only way she can find to get Tommy off to college is to knuckle under to her mother once again.

• • • •

MOST readers—and certainly the local ones—will turn from dear stupid Cecilia to the rich and amusing gallery of characters which Miss Glenn has set on this Washington scene. "Certainly, in self-defense," she writes, "the inhabitants of a city which is laid out along the lines of a spider web, are led to assume the characteristics of the spider. They lurk, and pounce, and do to death with words." And "Cave Dwellers," politicians, service folk and diplomats will go thumbing through the book to see if Miss Glenn has struck them here on sharp and nimble pins.

She is not aware of this tendency, and her "caveat emptor" notice is worth quoting: "The characters and incidents in this story are imaginary, but, with one of the lesser known frailties of human nature, many persons will be sure that they are in it. Others will say that they are thankful they are not in it. None of them are in it. With which liturgy I rest."

Very lively in their own right are Mrs. Latham, who regrets not having married Mr. Tabor and never lets Mrs. Tabor forget it; the Senator, who looks like a caricature of all Senators; the old retired admirals and generals who sniff at the world going by Farragut Square; De Soto, Latin-American diplomat with an ultra-smooth tongue in his head; old Mr. Boynton, who scandalizes the town by driving around in his victoria with his newlywed wife, a retired madam; Mrs. Trent-Torney, apotheosis of Midwestern social climbers, and the gusty Mrs. Twelvetrees, guide and mentor to any Congressman who wants to know how to use a salad-fork and to any distracted mother who aches to put her daughter on the Washington market.

Familiar scenes are here — our streets and hotels and clubs; the rout and press on Pennsylvania avenue during the opera bouffe over the bonus marchers ("Washington's dreadful year," Miss Glenn calls it), that delicious day when we all "saw beer in" and scampered up and down the streets with the cherished cases.

With keen, amused, and ironic eye, from her high apartment over Dupont Circle, Miss Glenn has watched us all and put us into "The Little Candle's Beam." As a story, it seems to me less successful than her last novel, that little masterpiece of life around the South China Sea, "Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age." As a picture of Washington, it is too barbed, revealing, and high-spirited to be missed.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

IT is now becoming possible to see some of the results of the recent love-feast of the labor leaders and Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Richberg. We were told at the time that in return for another member on the NRA board and promises to see that organized labor got a better deal Bill Green and John Lewis were to support the bill extending the NRA. The promises of a better deal are understood to have included Mr. Roosevelt's support of the Wagner labor disputes bill. Mr. Roosevelt has been careful not to give any public promise of this support yet but it is a fact that the understanding on the part of Bill and John is so definite on this point that they will hit the ceiling if the support is not forthcoming.

BARGERON.

To understand what it all really means we should cease calling it the Wagner labor disputes bill and call it what it is, the bill to relieve Bill Green, instead.

The Administration has been quite provoked at his inability to get more members with the assistance he was given in 1933. The Wagner bill is simply to give him another chance, to give him again the opportunity of telling workers that the Government wants them to join up with him. The result, if the bill is passed, of course, will be stimulated labor controversies throughout the summer.

The utter sham of the bill is emphasized in the argument over "majority rule." Bill insists that if he gets the majority of the workers in a plant he should have the right to represent them all. The truth is that it takes no law to give this standing to Bill. Whenever he gets a 50 per cent membership in any plant he has a force to be reckoned with and there are darned few employers who wouldn't reckon with him, and any contract that is negotiated will necessarily apply to every man in the plant. What he wants is a bill providing that when he gets 50 per cent of the members the other 50 per cent must automatically come into his union, or in other words that the "closed shop" would be set up. It is doubtful if the United States Government can bring this condition about. But with the bill back of him he, Green, will be able to conduct another membership drive and see if he fares any better than he did last time.

So this is what the Administration is doing for Bill.

Bill and John, in turn, are to support the bill for the extension of the NRA. Apparently, this does not mean simply to support it in Congress. They must support Don Richberg in his effort to put new life in the old bird while Congress is debating what to do with it.

What could be more dramatic, for example, than the headlines of the last two days shouting that Don and the NRA are preparing to act to avert a Nation-wide strike in the soft coal fields April 1. Gosh, if a thing like that is averted there can hardly be anyone to gainsay the worth of Don and the NRA. It would take a most stubborn person to speak disparagingly of them right after they had accomplished such as this.

Business men generally must have had another attack of the jitters when they heard of this threatened strike and to have expressed fervent hopes when they heard Don and the NRA were on the way to the rescue that they would get there in time. It's as melodramatic as the movies of a decade ago. One devoutly hopes he gets there on his trusty steed and saves the girl who is in the clutches of the villain because her Dad has a mortgage over his head.

• • • •

The only flaw in the whole thing is that none of us had thought there was going to be a strike. John and the soft coal operators have been negotiating for several weeks. The contracts under which the miners are working expire April 1. John has been making a perfunctory demand for an increase in wages and a 30-hour week, but everybody acquainted with the situation considers he will be very well satisfied to hold onto what he got in 1933, and this the operators are prepared to give.

Indeed, the story of this "threatened" Nation-wide strike didn't make the front pages until Don and the NRA rushed to the rescue. And maybe now the miners will be called out for a couple of days to make the rescue seem real. This rescue work causes one to wonder, however, what the Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins, is doing.

Orchardists Back By-Product Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., March 28.—Establishment of an apple by-product factory in Chambersburg along the lines of a cooperative enterprise was indorsed by 25 Franklin County fruit growers at a meeting here last night.

The proposed plant would be operated under the management of Howard M. Lum, former New York canner, and would be capitalized for about $40,000. Lum is well known to Franklin County orchardists, having bought apples from county growers for a number of years.

H. W. Skinner, chairman of the orchard group, appointed a committee composed of R. T. Criswell, J. H. Karns, W. O. Bingham, D. M. Bream and Glenn R. Grissinger to confer with Lum on the proposal. If a favorable decision is reached it was the understanding of the orchardists that they would subscribe to preferred stock in the proposed company.

What Is New Deal's Policy Toward Labor?

Rumored "Bargain" Calls For Support Of Majority Rule and Wagner Bill.

By Elliott Thurston.

WHERE does the New Deal stand on its labor policy? That puzzle has continued to plague the business world as well as labor leaders ever since the Administration took office. It is acutely to the fore again because of the widespread assumption that Mr. Roosevelt has made a "deal" with labor calling not only for a dominant voice in NRA, which it has never had, but for passage of the Wagner bill.

Fresh alarms are being sounded over that measure. It is cited as a fresh threat to recovery because of the labor warfare it allegedly will invite and the increased costs it allegedly will add to production. It undoubtedly is a bill to promote labor unions in addition to protecting the mere right to collective bargaining as guaranteed under the storm-beset section 7(a) of the NRA. It is unquestionably a measure designed to abolish the company union and to impose upon the Government terrific responsibilities which many think it totally incapable of discharging.

Nevertheless, it would be far better to know what the New Deal labor policy is, however drastic it may seem, than to go on trying to guess. As with so much New Deal reformation, it is the fear and uncertainty over the unknown that does so much to balk recovery. If the rules of the game, however changed and onerous, are only known it is preferable to continual perplexity as to what they are going to be.

Moreover, there is something to be said for the view, perhaps held at the White House, that it is politically necessary to hold rather than break organized labor. That is, it is not merely a matter of votes, but of which course is best calculated to promote the industrial peace essential to the progress of recovery. And it is clear that the confusion over labor policy which has existed almost from the outset, and was particularly acute last year, breeds endless strife.

• • • •

IT is easy enough to fling bricks at the too numerous New Deal agencies and makeshifts set up in the attempt to deal with the endless and extremely difficult problems involved in labor relations. But many able men have sat in on the various boards. Nobody has any panacea.

The original National Labor Board, of which Senator Wagner was chairman, dealt with 4,277 disputes, involving upward of 2,000,000 workers, and settled most of the troubles peaceably. Often the labor boards have rendered hopelessly conflicting opinions. Some have upheld the majority rule, as in the pending famous Houde case. Others, as in the President's settlement of the threatened automobile strike, stood by the rule of "proportional representation," bitterly opposed by organized labor.

Here is the heart of the controversy, and surely it is better to know where the New Deal stands on it than to have any more beating around the bush. The Wagner bill enthrones the majority rule idea. It is strenuously resisted by large sections of industry. It may, indeed, mean creation of a labor "dictatorship." Certainly labor thinks it will be the "magna charta" which 7(a) was too hastily heralded to be. The A. F. of L. undoubtedly feels that under the majority rule it could extend its sway enormously where now it is faring poorly, as in its failure to organize the automobile industry. There is no blinking the fact that much industry will fight to the end before giving in to the majority rule principle, and that therefore until it is settled the battle over it will bedevil and delay recovery.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, it is open to question whether it is politically possible or economically desirable to put off the issue, as the President tried to do when he called for a "truce" between labor and industry last fall. One consideration undoubtedly uppermost at the White House is that the A. F. of L. thinks it has enough strength in parts and accessory plants to shut down the automobile industry which alone of the heavy industries is booming and keeping the industrial structure from stagnating.

It is notable that the majority rule principle is supported by the Twentieth Century Fund's special committee, on which were prominent industrialists and others, including Prof. Sumner H. Slichter, of Harvard, and former Gov. Winant, of New Hampshire, who can hardly be considered radical. In fact, the committee's recommendations are not essentially in conflict with the purposes and apparently the text of the Wagner bill.

The issue has been batted all over the lot for nearly two years. It is certainly time to have a showdown and some finality on it, one way or the other. The present set-up of labor boards is altogether confusing. Nobody knows what the rules of the game are, what the law is or may be. Legal authority, if any, is cloudy. There is a flock of conflicting rulings, some being battled over in the courts. If the New Deal has made a new deal with organized labor, as widely suspected, it ought to be brought out into the open.

Here is one uncertainty which can be removed—even if much of industry does not like the bargain. Almost anything is better than more groping in the dark.

Tax Rate of $1 Fixed in Loudoun

Increase of 20 Cents Is Tentatively Approved.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., March 28.—A tax levy of $1 per $100 assessed valuation of property was tentatively fixed by the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors here yesterday. This is an increase of 20 cents over last year's 80-cent rate. Additional rates in several districts in the county were tentatively continued as follows: Lovettsville school rate, 20 cents; Mercer, 5 cents; Mount Gilead, 10 cents, and town of Leesburg school district, 40 cents.

This tentative $1 rate is on an estimated assessment of $14,600,000 making $146,0000 for school and county expenditures. Of this amount $100,000 is tentatively appropriated to the schools, and $46,000 for general county expenses. The county's expenses were approximately $53,000 least year.

The school board asked for an appropriation of $112,252, and a number of citizens spoke today in favor of this amount for schools. This is approximately $30,000 more than the schools received last year. This requested extra amount was to take care of an increase in the teachers' salaries of about $12,000 and $10,000 in excess of last year's expenses for transportation, vocational teachers, fuel, repairs, supplies and other incidentals.

Britain Alters Security Plan To Woo Hitler

Compromise Drafted, but Simon Says Reich Won't Join Stresa Parley.

largely on the outcome of conversations at Moscow and Warsaw being conducted by Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, it was said.

A press dispatch from Moscow this evening quoted British circles in close touch with developments there and at Berlin as saying the Anglo-French peace plan still exists as the basis for the Anglo-Russian conversations, the Moscow negotiations being referred to as "continuation" of those at Berlin.

It appeared certain that Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France would go to Stresa determined to maintain the French thesis that Germany can be curbed only by renewal of the old system of armed alliances against her.

Paris Despairs of Peace.

French quarters, startled by Hitler's six demands presented to the British visitors, were described as without hope of achieving peace in collaboration with Germany

The Hitler program reported from Paris—without official confirmation or comment—coincided in several important phases with that divulged by responsible British sources yesterday: Economic union with Austria, air strength equal to France's, warships totaling 400,000 tons, restoration of some Czechoslovak territory and depatriation of 3,500,000 Germans resident therein.

French officials said they foresaw the likelihood of war if Germany made any attempt to enforce these demands, recalling that Italy mobilized and Yugoslavia was ready to do so when last July's Nazi putsch threatened Austrian independence.

The cabinet began its search for another security plan as further sensational information concerning the Hitler-Simon conversation revealed that Germany not only wants the return of all her former colonies, but demands, in addition, mandates from the League of Nations so that she will be equal in her opinion to any power in the world.

Hitler dropped this bombshell unexpectedly into the laps of Simon and Eden, saying the powers now holding mandates should be forced to share some of their territories with Germany if she returns to the League of Nations.

Barrier to League.

This demand alone was regarded as an obstacle sufficiently large to block Germany's re-entry into league activity.

Der Fuehrer's surprising demands, too, were expected to have their influence in spurring France and Italy, already restless, along the headlong course back to the old pre-war system of armed alliances.

It is this trend Great Britain is eager to check. While specific proposals for the compromise security scheme have yet to be written down, it was learned, Eden has been instructed to sound Soviet opinion concerning possible modification of the Eastern Locarno pact, which Germany thus far had disdained.

It is known Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, as well as Simon, is playing an important part in the study of the new system. He and Simon were the creators of the original inclusive system, which was given impetus by the Anglo-French discussions.

Great Britain is continuing diplomatic consultations with Frnace and Italy, but no effort will be made to reach any preliminary decision before the full review of the situation at Stresa, it was stated.

Simon today gave United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham an outline of what happened at Berlin, this being the second time the United States has been officially informed on the security plan explorations. The foreign secretary saw Ray Atherton, charge d'affaires during Bingham's absence, before his departure to the German capital.

'Wait for Stresa,' Says France

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 28.—France appeared tonight to have practically abandoned hope of achieving lasting peace with Germany and to be turning toward her old alliances.

Official silence was maintained on reports Adolf Hitler had made six demands when British statesmen visited him this week, but privately officials said an attempt to enforce them might mean war.

"Wait for Stresa" was the foreign office's official answer to questions. At that meeting, April 11, France, Britain and Italy will give Hitler an answer, it was said.

French officials said the Berlin conference opened the eyes of the British to the German menace to peace and therefore hope that at Stresa Britain would join France and Italy in a policy of building a wall of protective alliances around Germany.

Whether the convicted Germans would appeal to a higher tribunal for a new trial, which can be done within a fortnight, or seek a presidential pardon, remained undetermined tonight.

Nazis Preparing for Conflict, Litvinoff Warns Capt. Eden

Eastern Security Pact Meets Approval of Both Conferees.

more greatly, affected by this danger, for it points in all directions.

"It would be naive to expect the instigators of this danger to tell us at exactly what points we must protect ourselves. Nor has there yet been invented a weapon capable of firing in one direction only."

The remark was interpreted as meaning that Great Britain may be menaced as much by Germany's rearmament as Russia.

The commissar said the Eden visit was not merely the beginning of new Anglo-Russian co-operation for peace, but a pledge for its continuation.

Capt. Eden, responding, said the intention of his visit was as in Berlin, "exploratory." He made it clear he was not in Moscow to negotiate, but believed the talks would mark "a hopeful landmark in the relations between our two countries."

Foresees a Solution.

Eden said the present European situation can be improved only by a frank exchange of views and that he felt, regardless of differences on various issues, he and Litvinoff could find a common ground for a just and honorable solution of present European difficulties.

Eden is to confer again with Litvinoff tomorrow, and is scheduled to interview Josef Stalin at the Kremlin during the day.

The Anglo-Russian conference got off to a good start, with agreement of both sides reported on points as far as they have gone.

The points were not enumerated, but obviously included the projected eastern European security pact, in which Russia desires to participate, together with Poland, Germany and the Baltic States.

Capt. Eden met with Litvinoff for two hours. Eden was reported to have explained the Anglo-German talks held early this week and then proceeded with discussions of the Anglo-French peace proposals, as well as the Eastern security pact with armed assistance by the signatories against any aggressor. These proposals are the basis of the Moscow conversations, as they were of the Berlin parley.

Eden was believed to have been particularly frank in discussing the attitude of Hitler toward the Soviet Union—an attitude which has caused rising concern in Russia in recent months. The Soviet government feels the Nazis are planning to encroach on neighboring States in Hitler's alleged move to restore the Reich to its pre-war might and prestige. Strained relations are evident.

It was understood in foreign diplomatic circles and in Moscow that the British representatives left Berlin highly dissatisfied with Hitler's attitude and convinced he is unwilling to co-operate in an effective security pact for the East.

The question before Eden and Litvinoff therefore appears to be whether France, Russia, Poland and other eastern European States will conclude such a pact without Germany.

Although Britain is not expected to join this pact, its attitude is considered most important here because of London's influence on the other States concerned.

Gold Bloc Split Believed Near In Belga Crisis

Bourse Closed; Devaluation of 28 Pct. Reported Plan of Premier.

cree on currency measures Saturday or Sunday.

It was planned to keep Parliament in continuous session until action on the government's program. Political groups agreed to vote confidence in the new cabinet tomorrow on condition that the premier explains definitely what will be done to the belga.

No official word of the government's plans was available. Newspapers were forbidden to refer to possible devaluation or abandonment of the gold standard.

Political Tension Grows.

Internal political tension increased as a result of the currency situation, Catholics, liberals and Socialists declaring they had agreed to participate in the cabinet only on condition that the belga be maintained at its present gold parity. Charges were made that the government ignored offers of the Bank of France and Bank of England to support the belga when it slumped far below the gold point after the new cabinet was formed.

Meanwhile, apprehension over the future of the gold bloc—France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and Italy—grew. It was evident yesterday in Paris when a big shift in gold to London took place. This was attributed generally to the transfer by gold bloc capitalists of their holdings into sterling.

The belga continued its slump in the world's money markets. The continuous decline has foreshadowed devaluation since Van Zeeland, former vice governor of the Bank of Belgium, undertook to form a cabinet to succeed that of George Theunis, veteran statesman and gold standard champion, who resigned under the ever-increasing pressure of devaluationists in the Parliament.

The cabinet approved terms of the ministerial declaration which Premier Van Zeeland will read to the chamber tomorrow.

Interest Here Roused By Monetary Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Obviously more concerned with ultimate than immediate consequences, Washington financial and diplomatic officials yesterday intently followed the developing European monetary crisis.

Belgium's difficulties and the expected devaluation of the belga, possibly today, will have but a negligible effect, of itself, upon American trade, it was predicted.

But informed observers quickly added:

If this, together with an apparent loss of confidence in the Swiss franc and some shakiness of the French franc, forecasts a general collapse of the European gold bloc, the effect will be far reaching but not necessarily altogether adverse.

One Hopeful Factor.

The one hopeful factor in such a situation, it was said in a reliable quarter, would be that finally the world's principal financial nations would be upon somewhat the same footing, and stabilization of currencies through international agreements would be correspondingly facilitated.

Meanwhile, Treasury officials adopted for the time being a new method of short-term financing. Instead of borrowing $100,000,000 weekly, as has been the practice, the amount will be restricted to $50,000,000.

Weekly maturities total $75,000,000 and of this amount, $25,000,000 will be redeemed for the present in cash from the Treasury's $2,367,000,000 general fund. To that inconsequential extent the plan is inflationary.

"Shadow-Boxing" Efforts.

One official yesterday described past and present efforts at stabilization of currencies as a series of "shadow-boxing" maneuvers.

Eventual revaluation of the gold bloc currencies has been regarded for months as inevitable. However, the nations principally involved—France, Belgium, Italy and Switzerland—have been engaged in an effort to postpone such action until after the stabilization of the dollar and the pound.

Madrid, March 28.—Spain is considering seriously devaluing its monetary unit, the peseta (13.66½ cents in New York today), in an effort to regain lost foreign trade, it was learned tonight.

An immediate incentive toward such objective is the adverse trade balance with the United States, now approximating 100,000,000 pesetas ($13,665,000) annually.

There is tied up now in Spain $20,000,000 belonging to firms in the United States. The tie-up is caused chiefly by lack of foreign exchange for which experts say "there is no immediate relief."

"The foreign exchange situation is becoming worse daily," a leading banker said today, "largely as a result of the adverse trade balance."

Trade Balance.

In 1934, he explained, Spain imported 860,000,000 gold pesetas' worth of goods and exported 612,000,000 pesetas, while in 1933 she imported 830,000,000 and exported 670,000,000 pesetas. Thus imports and exports alike are falling.

The Spanish peseta has been one of Europe's most stable currencies. Linked to the French franc, it has fluctuated narrowly under strict supervision of the Bank of Spain. For months it has been quoted between 7.3 and 7.34 pesetas to the dollar (13.70 and 13.62 cents).

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—With the European gold bloc seen as tottering, leading economists and bankers said today its collapse might be a jolt to the United States, but they saw favorable long-term effects.

Closing of the Belgian bourse was widely accepted as a prelude to devaluation by one of the closely knit little group of countries that have been struggling to maintain the free gold standard and the predepression levels of their currencies.

How soon the movement would spread through the other members of the group was a matter of conjecture.

A number of monetary experts said the action of the pound sterling was more important to the United States than the action of gold bloc currencies, and repercussions here from collapse of the gold standard would depend chiefly on the effect upon the British pound in its relation to the dollar.

Prof. Irving Fisher, Yale University economist, viewed the results of a possible gold bloc fall as not severe.

Nye to Submit His Bills Today For Neutrality

Committee Praises Record of Baruch and Byrnes Lauds Patriot.

ago the American admiralty took the position that this country should not surrender any neutral rights in advance. The Navy has strongly favored maintenance of the policy of "freedom of the seas." The details of its present attitude are not so well known since Germany has thrown a war scare into Europe. As a matter of strategy, it is possible the Navy would wish to keep clear of any European conflict until relations in the Pacific become stabilized.

Baruch Backs Proposals.

Meanwhile Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board and outstanding financier, indorsed proposals to define the Nation's neutrality policy in such a way as to keep it out of future wars. While testifying before the Nye committee, he agreed with Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, that during war abroad American nationals and shipping would venture into the danger zone at their own risk and without involving the prestige and honor of this Government.

Senator Bone elicited from Mr. Baruch the contention that this is the time for the United States to define its neutrality policy, at the conclusion of the white-haired financier's second day on the witness stand. Earlier in the hearing he indorsed elimination of tax-exempt bonds and Government ownership of munitions plants to give the Government "a yardstick" on costs.

Mr. Baruch's testimony during the two days he has been on the witness stand might be termed a revelation to some of the committee members. Not only did he take the committee by surprise when he launched into a frank exposition of his financial affairs during the World War to repudiate insinuations he had profited at that time, but they also gasped when he indorsed some of the most advanced ideas held by the committee.

Would "Go the Limit."

Mr. Baruch has made it plain that he believes in "going the limit" to keep this country out of war and, if it becomes involved, to take the profits out of war. He has agreed with virtually every proposition put up to him by committee members, such as limitation of incomes in wartime by drastic taxation; "paying for a war as you fight;" fixing maximum prices in wartime and Government operation of munition plants.

Senator Nye after yesterday's hearing virtually gasped. He said that eight months ago when he started out on this inquiry he believed one of the wildest ideas being projected was nationalization of muntions manufactures. Mr. Baruch's qualified indorsement of that idea, he held, was a result of the committee's disclosures.

The committee assumed the role of defending Mr. Baruch and by inference apologized for anything it has done leading to "insinuations" against him. Senator James F. Brynes (Democrat), of South Carolina, unexpectedly appeared before the committee at the outset of yesterday's hearings. He said he wished to term "unfair" any "insinuations" regarding Mr. Baruch's wartime record.

Senator Byrnes explained he had been chairman of a House committee during the war which had examined Mr. Baruch's activities. He said this committee learned that Mr. Baruch not only had served the Government at a sacrifice to his personal fortune, as he revealed yesterday, but that he spent his own money to assist the Government.

Paid Girls' Fare Home.

The South Carolinian cited an instance when Mr. Baruch paid the expenses of a commission to Europe to determine whether American exports were being diverted from war purposes to commercial use. Mr. Baruch refused reimbursement, he said. He also told how Mr. Baruch had taken steps to get the girls who had come to Washington for temporary war work returned to their homes after the conflict, paying the railroad fares of those who did not have the money.

Senator Byrnes said he thought some one should place in the record the truth about Mr. Baruch's activities in order to show that while "other men might have used the power given to them to accumulate wealth, this man used his wealth to serve his government and to help young women to return to their homes."

Almost indignantly, Senator Nye denied the committee had called Mr. Baruch to criticize him. He said the group wished to hear his views on the problems before it, since he had a rich experience as chairman of the War Industries Board and as a student for many years of war profits and mobilization of industry in wartime. Other Senators commented similarly.

The committee questioned Mr. Baruch at length regarding copper prices during the war and the transactions between the industries board and the copper producers. Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, contended that at a crucial point in the war the copper interests were in effect "holding a gun to the Government by saying they would not deliver any more copper unless the price was increased."

"They could say it," replied Mr. Baruch, "but they couldn't get away with it, and they didn't get away with it."

The witness contended that much of the trouble experienced during the last war was due to the lack of machinery for transforming industry from a peacetime to a wartime basis. He contended that by placing a "ceiling" on prices at the outset of the war many of the difficulties could have been eliminated.

Mr. Baruch indorsed government ownership of munitions plants under some circumstances when Senator Nye cited the present case of the Colt Manufacturing Co. and the NRA. The company, on which the Government is dependent for machine guns, has lost its NRA eagle because of alleged refusal to observe Section 7(a) (collective bargaining) of the act.

The financier said that in such situations the Government would have to do the manufacturing itself, adding that it would be one way of getting "a yardstick on costs."

When Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, brought up the question of tax-exempt Government bonds, Mr. Baruch agreed they should be eliminated. He agreed their existence made difficult a fair tax structure. He doubted whether the tax-exempt clause in outstanding bonds could validly be abrogated, but he held no further bonds with this privilege should be issued.

For a Rigid Policy.

Senator Bone questioned Mr. Baruch regarding his view on a neutrality policy. The Washingtonian, who believes that Congress should lay down "rigid iron-clad rules on neutrality," asked the financier whether he thought American nationals should have the right to venture into war zones and expect their Government to protect them should they get into trouble. Mr. Baruch said he did not.

He contended that one of the most important questions before the country was formulation of a neutrality policy under which the danger of the United States being dragged into a foreign conflict should be reduced to the minimum. Such a policy during the early years of the World War might have kept this country out of that conflict, he said.

He agreed with Senator Bone that this Government should embargo munitions and forbid travel by its citizens into the war zone, except at their own peril. Mr. Baruch held that another world war would mean a "crumbling of civilization."

After the hearing Senator Nye revealed he would place tentative drafts of neutrality legislation before the committee today. He said he was intensely interested in arousing public opinion to the danger which threatens this Nation from a foreign war and believed that everything possible should be done.

Criticizes "Drifting."

"The committee at this session of Congress has not time to formulate a complete neutrality program," the chairman explained. "The problem has many ramifications requiring the closest study and deliberation. But we believe that something should be done at once to start the ball rolling and for that reason we have planned to deal with several of the more obvious aspects of the problem.

"I believe that steps should be taken immediately to see that whenever any American enters a war zone his Government will not be at his heels to protect him. There is no reason why this country should be involved in a foreign war because a citizen, on personal or highly profitable business, ventures into the war area and gets hurt.

"The same is true of American shipping. I probably would go further than some of my colleagues. I would absolutely forbid the export of any commodities, regardless of their nature, to a belligerent in any ship bearing the American flag. If belligerent nations want our commodities let them come here for them and take all the risk.

"I have high hopes that the American people will become aroused to their precarious situation due to our policy of drifting along. I have no doubt that, once they understand the situation, they will support a strict program of neutrality, even though it eliminates profits out of the warfare of other people."

Belittling of 'Envoy' Resented by Arizona

By the Associated Press.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 28.—The Arizona "ambassadorship" to Washington will be only a part-time job, Gov. B. B. Moeur said today in a warm retort to barbed criticism of the idea.

"There has been a h—— of a lot of capital made out of it without any ground to stand on," he said. "All of these moves are belittling Arizona in the eyes of the Federal Government, and I fear it will impair our relief status."

Moeur said it was probable he would not use $1,000 of the $7,500 appropriated by the Legislature to maintain a "representative" of the State in the National Capital.

A couple of days ago this notice appeared in The Washington Post:

"Embassy wanted—Want suitable site to build elaborate embassy for housing Arizona's new ambassador (sic). Prefer location near river front to accommodate our fleet. Address communications to Frank L. Gegax, chairman Democratic county committee, Phoenix, Ariz."

Arizona's "navy" consists of two privately owned cargo boats operating on the Colorado River.

Creditor and Debtor Lose in Court Action

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., March 28.—It doesn't always pay to go to court, and O. L. Shull and Taylor Campbell know it now.

Shull sued Campbell for $2.50, claiming $1.50 due him for pasturage for a cow and $1 for insurance on the animal. Campbell admitted the insurance claim, but not the one for pasturage.

Trial Justice W. Terrell Sheehan could not get the men to reach an agreement, and finally entered judgment in favor of Shull for $1.50, ruling that each should pay half the court costs. Each owed the court $4.23, and the court issued an execution of the judgment—which cost Campbell $1.50 additional.

Prince Georges Sanctions Cut Of Bond Issue

School Program Modified by Agreement With County Delegation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 28.—A slightly modified program of school improvements, and a reduction of $70,000 in the proposed school bond issue in Prince Georges County, were agreed upon today at a last-minute conference between the county legislative delegation and other county officials.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer and the county members of the House of Delegates were advised by Ormond W. Phair, president of the school board; Perry Boswell, president of the board of county commissioners; Vinton D. Cockey, a member of the board, and Nicholas Orem, county superintendent of schools, that the orginal recommendation of $235,000 requested by them had been reconsidered.

The unanimous recommendation of the county commissioners and the school authorities, according to these officials, was that a bond issue of $165,000 be authorized. The legislators agreed upon the change.

Would Use PWA Funds.

It was emphasized by the county officials that by use of available PWA funds the projects, as outlined by the school board in its original recommendation, could be completed, with the exception that four-room units would be constructed at Maryland Park High School and Bladensburg Junior High School instead of eight-room units.

Superintendent Orem said that the program would meet present and future needs of the schools for five years and permit establishment of a four-year senior high school at Bladensburg. Extension of the junior high school course at Bladensburg has been the objective of a strenuous fight by parent-teacher associations and citizens' organizations for the past several years.

It was also pointed out that the school program as amended would provide for the addition of auditoriums which have been requested at Maryland Park, Bladensburg and Hyattsville.

Amendments Prepared.

The country legislative delegation expressed gratification that additional PWA funds would be available and that increasing the bonded debt $70,000 could be avoided.

Delegate Charles C. Marbury, chairman of the county House delegation, announced following the conference that amendments would be offered to the orignial $235,000 bond issue bill at tonight's session.

The specific projects covered by the amendments are as follows:

District Line Elementary School, $50,000, for eight new classrooms, replacing old rooms. Original plan, $65,000; $15,000 to be provided by PWA funds.

Maryland Park High School, $55,000 for auditorium and four additional classrooms. Original plan, $75,000; elimination of four proposed classrooms.

Hyattsville Elementary School, $10,000 augmenting available funds for auditorium and four additional classrooms. Original plan, $25,000; $15,000 to be provided by PWA funds.

Bladensburg Junior High School, $50,000 for auditorium and four additional classrooms, providing facilities for senior high school. Original plan, $70,000; elimination of four proposed classrooms.

Virginian Takes His Life With Gas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., March 28.—Running a piece of garden hose from a jet in the kitchen to a couch on which he reclined in the dining room, Ralph C. Spencer, about 63, turned on the gas and ended his life, according to a verdict returned last night by Dr. T. M. Parkins, coroner.

Mrs. Spencer died a month ago, and Dr. Parkins said: "There was no reason for him to do it, but that he just could not live alone, and made up his mind to go and be with his wife."

The coroner said Spencer had been dead for 12 or 15 hours when found. Nearby were three notes: One to the coroner, asking him to notify a sister, Mrs. D. P. North, in Athens, Pa.; another to a funeral director here, and a third to the sister.

Funeral arrangements await the arrival of Mrs. North.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer moved to Staunton last September from Springfield, Mass. She died February 27. They were married last August. He was a retired business man.

Fairfax Grange Votes Support Of Health Unit

Committee Named to Protest Against Any Cut in Appropriation.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Almost unanimous indorsement of the present Fairfax County Health Department, and a strong plea for retention in the budget of the appropriation for its continued operation, marked the bi-monthly meeting of the Fairfax County Pomona Grange, in the Oakton school house. Mrs. Harmon Roberts, William J. Cleveland and H. B. Derr were appointed a committee to attend the public hearing on the budget next week to urge that no reduction be made, by supervisors, in money allocated for the department. They will also protest against the substitute plan offered by the County Medical Association as "impracticable, selfish and inefficient."

Dr. Jessie Thornton Scott, president, and Dr. E. S. Waring, of the County Medical Society, addressed the grange outlining the substitute plan. Dr. Scott said the first step toward the founding of a county hospital was the elimination of the county health unit. The plan of the society provides for two county nurses, places the contagious work in the hands of two doctors, with the school work turned over to local physicians.

Grange members said the county health work would suffer under any such proposed arrangements and that two nurses could not cover the county for bedside nursing, keep records and office hours and do all other work required of the unit.

Fairfax County farmers who cooperated with the AAA in the corn-hog reduction program are now, with few exceptions, receiving their final payment. This payment amounts to $8,643.87, distributed to 46 signers.

Blanton's Part In D. C. Affairs Is Defended

Rep. Cannon Gives Speech in House to Aid Texan Criticized for Deal.

cused him from making such a report.

Inspector Lamb gave to Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of the Crime Committee, a comparative report showing traffic deaths here since 1923. Beginning with 1923, traffic fatalities for each year were 91, 91, 84, 76, 84, 83, 84, 77, 85, 123, 80 and 135 for 1934. Since the first of the present year, Inspector Lamb and Sergt. John J. Agnew, of the Traffic Bureau, explained, six more persons have died as a result of accidents which occurred in 1934.

Blanton Is Defended.

Representative Cannon took the floor of the House to defend Blanton, he said, to "give some indication of the absurdity of some of these reports" growing out of revelations of Blanton's interference in Police Department matters.

"Mr. Blanton," said Representative Cannon, "has been charged with responsibility for putting in the District appropriations bill a provision for an additional assistant superintendent of police."

Persual of the official record of the Crime Committee hearings shows that no member of the committee made that accusation against Blanton. Members of the committee, who were on the floor when the speeches were made, did not deign to make reply.

"That's ridiculous," Cannon continued. "Instead of placing that iiem in the bill he opposed its inclusion. The statement Mr. Blanton put it in the bill is as far from the truth as could be.

Cut in Police Fund Denied.

"It has been reported the District Appropriations sub-committee cut down the number of policemen in the District.

"We did not cut one single man. We didn't cut one single dollar from what they said they needed. We gave them every man and every dollar they asked for."

Both Blanton and Cannon have wide influence among the House members. Blanton has threatened to turn loose a personal blast against one of the crime committee members who has not had so long a service in the House as he. The anti-District contingent among the House membership applauded him when he ceased shouting and sat down.

Police Changes Foreseen.

That some changes would be made in the Police Department as a result of the Blanton-Brown-Headley-Bean-Hazen "gentlemen's agreement" has been regarded as a foregone conclusion. The civil war which has flared up in the Fifth Police Precinct also is expected to result in some changes. Capt. Joseph E. Morgan may be retired. He is one of the several police officials, 55 years of age or more, who have been ordered before the Board of Police Surgeons for examination.

Police Department gossip, which is emphatically denied by police officials, is to the effect that Inspector Headley is to be retired.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, has made it plain he will not retire at this time. Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, assistant superintendent of police, in command of the Detective Bureau, also has said he will not retire. Inspector Bean, eligible for retirement, is determined not to retire during the hubbub. Maj. Brown is reported to have been considering retirement, but has determined he will not retire at this time. When things have settled down, he may, or he may not.

Prettyman Testifies.

While all of these things were being talked of and fought over outside the Crime Committee, E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, appeared before the committee and said that handling of minor cases was a real problem to which especial attention should be devoted.

Everyone, Prettyman said, would agree there were defects in the present system. Difficulties, he said, arose from lack of proper facilities, and "the mass of work, the sheer number of cases."

"I agree," Prettyman said, "with a statement made on the floor of the House that the existing facilities of our Police Court are a national disgrace and that Congress ought not to let the session pass without providing a remedy.

He gave the committee a tabulation showing the number of cases handled by his office in Police Court in the last fiscal year. The total was 54,823, he said. In addition to these, he said, there were at least 25,000 in which "informations" or formal papers had not been filed.

54,823 Cases Reported.

"Informations," Prettyman said, had been filed for the following offenses:

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

D. C. Motorists' Liability Voted At Last on 'Hill'

House Action Assures New Law; Taxi Insurance Plan Defeated.

portunity to raise a point of no quorum, but accepted the rejecting vote of 47 to 37.

The Schulte amendment, reported to have been drafted by one of the smaller cab companies, not only would have made insurance of taxicabs mandatory, but would have limited the number of cabs to 2,500. There are now 4,375 on the streets.

Representative Thomas Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, appeared in the unusual role of backing Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee in support of the bill and in opposition to the taxi amendment.

He was reminded, however, by Carpenter, who read from the Record, that he had indorsed taxicab insurance in a speech on the floor in January and had advocated reducing the number of cabs to 3,000.

Nichols, who has clashed previously with District residents in condemning the Gravelly Point airport site, based his appeal to the House chiefly on the hazards that Washington taxicabs constituted for their constituents.

Denies Insurance Bias.

Chairman Norton suggested that "the people of Washington have a prior claim in this matter to our constituents."

"We're not interested in the insurance companies," she added, "but in making the streets of Washington a safer place for the people who live here."

Subsequently, Schulte hotly denied the insurance companies had a hand in his amendment, but when asked by Mrs. Norton what Washingtonians had asked for the amendment he failed to answer.

Supporters of the taxi amendment insisted that passage of the financial responsibility bill would serve as an obstacle to the passage of the separate taxi insurance bill now before the House District Committee.

Mrs. Norton and Patman, who heads the sub-committee which will handle the bill, promised that adequate hearings will be held and that the bill will be reported to the House if a majority of the committee wishes it. The House last year rejected a taxicab insurance bill, however.

"There's not a chance under the sun that the taxicab insurance bill will ever be reported out by the committee," Schulte warned.

Patman Pushes Fight.

Patman, who twice before had been responsible for a delay in House action on the financial responsiblity bill, made many arguments in its behalf yesterday, although Mrs. Norton conducted the fight, frequently interrupting opposition speakers and presenting a factual statement in support of the legislation.

The Texan predicted that adoption of the taxi amendment would bring about a tripling of taxi fares, costing the people of Washington $1,500,000 additional a year, and would benefit chiefly the insurance companies and lawyers rather than the public.

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the District Crime Investigating Committee, cited testimony given to his committee regarding traffic accidents in support of the bill.

Hearings Inadequate, Is Charge.

Charges that hearings on the bill had not been adequate, as persons who desired to be heard were confused by a change in time and place for the hearings, were made by Representative Merlin Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

Hull also predicted that the effect of the bill would be innocuous.

"You might as well pass Noah Webster's dictionary," he said. "The bill will mean nothing in preventing the first accidents."

Members of the New York delegation took an active part in urging adoption of the compulsory insurance provision for taxicabs, and one of them at one stage raised a point of no quorum.

After disposing of the auto liability bill, Mrs. Norton hurriedly put through three other bills which already have passed the Senate. These bills empower the District Commissioners to condemn land in excess of needs and broaden their authority in the condemnation and repair or demolition of unsafe and insanitary buildings.

The two latter bills are expected to assist District officials in the slum clearance work now being conducted by the Alley Authority.

The chapter voted in favor of converting Patrick Henry's home in Hanover County into a national shrine.

Virginia Miners Set for Walkout

Coal Workers Store Food for Idle Period.

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Va., March 28.—The partial paralysis of a walkout threat gripped the Lee County coal fields today as miners began speedy preparations to store food for the call, expected April 1.

An estimated 10,000 men make their living in the shafts of Lee and adjoining Wise County, while another 40,000 are either partially or wholly dependent on the miners for their living.

Retail merchants report a slowing up of sales in all lines but nonperishable foodstuffs and miner sentiment seemed to be receptive to the expected walkout. The threat was voiced from headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America.

300-Gallon Still Raided in Loudoun

1,400 Gallons of Mash Destroyed; None Arrested.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Marrh 28.—A 300-gallon still, the fourth seized since Federal agents began to dry up Loudoun County, was raided today by Federal and county officers on the Short Hill Mountain, 15 miles northwest of here.

No arrests were made. Sheriff E. S. Adrian said that the still was still warm when found, and that it appeared the operators had left only a few hours before. Vats containing 1,400 gallons of mash were destroyed. The third still of the series was a small, 75-gallon plant, which was found abandoned yesterday.

The drive on Loudoun County bootleggers started on March 16, and has resulted in the killing of one policeman and the wounding of a Federal man. The Federal agent was shot during a raid on a still and C. J. McClary, an Alexandria policeman, was killed by his assailant when he tried to arrest the man.

Company Wins Court Sanction To Reorganize

Creditors Unopposed to Virginia Alberne's Plan for Refinancing.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 28.—Reorganization of the bankrupt Virginia Alberne Corporation, a $1,000,000 soapstone firm of Schuyler, Nelson County, was approved today by Judge John Paul in United States District Court here.

Under the plan, the bondholders will receive stock of no par value in the new corporation. The court was informed that the corporation has the assurance of $125,000 operating capital from a Government agency. There was no opposition to the plan by creditors. The plant has been operated by a receiver for several months and the corporation is said to have the prospects of several large contracts.

Bonds for $1,500,000 were floated on the property in 1926. When the firm went bankrupt it had nearly $500,000 in other obligations.

James S. Russell, Archdeacon, Dies

Teacher Founded School for Negroes in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrenceville, Va., March 28.—Archdeacon James S. Russell, founder and principal emeritus of St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School here and nationally-known Negro educator, died at his home early today. He was 77 years old.

Archdeacon Russell had been in failing health for the past three years and had been confined to his home with an ailment for the past year.

A native of Mecklenburg County, Va., he came to Lawrenceville 53 years ago and seven years later, in 1888, founded St. Paul's School. He remained as its head until his retirement in 1929, when the direction of the institution was taken over by his son, the Rev. J. Alvin Russell.

The school which he fostered is the third largest industrial school for Negroes in the United States, ranking immediately after Hampton and Tuskegee.

Bolger Tonight May Entertain Shorehamites

Others of the Cast of 'Life Begins at 8:40' Due to Visit Club.

By Kay Ware.

Ray Bolger will be special guest of Manager Moore at the Shoreham tonight. Others of the "Life Begins at 8:40" cast will be on hand, too, and it is hinted that Mr. Bolger might be prevailed upon to appear for other patrons.

Seen at the Shoreham: Mathilde Rogers, popular deb and a large party of guests; Col. and Mrs. Henry Breckinridge, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guggenheim and Senator Byrd.

All seemed to enjoy Wilkins and Meyers, the dance team, and Billy Rayes, loaned from Schubert Brothers for this week's floor show. Mr. Rayes, incidentally, slightly resembles Movie Actor Gene Raymond. Amelia Gilmore, billed as a toe dancer, offers Spanish and tap numbers. Frances Steven's songs are light and happy—a help because most are concerned with heart trouble. Max Lowe's work, and Barnie directing, plays in the Lounge Cafe from 4:30 to 7 and later in the ballroom.

Didja know the Digitanoes are in town again? This time at Child's Gingham Club—a night spot that is coming up in the world. These dancers are a cross between ballroom and whirlwind variety, swift with their feet and smiles. They have a knack of going through a lot motions on the space of a dime—particularly when the lady's heels are where her head should be and she's dangled gracefully over the gentleman's shoulders.

Florence Barlow, another dancer; Sammy Richardson, booked as 'instrumentalist;" Mary Jo Hamilton, with songs; Jimmy Santmeyer and Boys complete the bill.

Best of all you get a show with your luncheon, and if you like it, stay through until the dinner show. It's worth a second look.

Al Norton, m. c. at the Lotus, is missing because he's vacationing in Florida. Meanwhile Lew Davie does well as a pinch hitter. Buddy, the tap dancer, goes over every show. Take a good look at the chorus of eight girls; they're practically cut to fit—at least, are all the same height. Some one whispered that they are all 19 or under.

Mayflower's lounge has been playing host to any number of celebrities recently. Most interesting personage is Miss Gladys Baker, peer of the newspaper interviewers. Miss Baker stopped off in Washington before leaving for Russia, Germany and Italy, there to talk to and write about Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini.

She has written stories about almost every famous person, nobility, dictators, presidents, every one. We saw her in close conversation with Anatole, of the lounge. What they were talking about no one knows, but Anatole is quite an authority on Europe, it is said.

Still the argument goes on. It may not be as important as the bonus or the NRA codes, but socialities about town are trying to decide who is the best dancer. There were three of the leading contestants in the lounge the other day—and none of them knew they were in a contest! It threatens to split the blue-book ranks.

Troika's songbird, Ethel Pastor, has gone in for opera this week, bringing down the house every night with such lilting little tunes as the aria from "La Traviata" and "Madame Butterfly." Also, that Russian club has introduced a new star, Seva Foullon, barytone, who does his barytoning while strumming a guitar and looking very noble and dashing in a Cossack costume. Then there is Vladimir Diloff, too, finishing up one of the longest engagements in local cabaret history, nightly booming out the "Volga Boatman's Song" and "The Flea," to the accompaniment of much foot stamping, hand waving and crescendos from the Troika Orchestra.

Troika's social list:

Senator Bilbo from Mississippi, Senator McAdoo, Senator Capper, Count and Countess de Leusse, Capt. and Mrs. John P. Jackson, Miss Deborah Dows, Waverly Taylor, Col. Hackett of the Sears & Roebuck Co.

High spots of the La Paree Winter Garden Revue are the football and basket ball number and the girls in the Bird Parade. The latter, all dressed as different birds, are led by pretty Kitty Wagner.

It's a Man's Burden for Any Man

—and Warner seems to be getting the worst of it. Margie and Mona, the poodle, looks as if they liked the ride. This team is appearing at Maryland Club Gardens.

The adagio number is an old favorite, and no wonder, what with you're wondering whether the girl will make a safe landing.

Seen at the National the other night: Johnny Slaughter, Fritz Maile, his associate director, and pretty vocalist, Ernestine Gardiner. Plus the Willard's own Kay Cunningham. Thereby proving that life stopped promptly at 8:40 in the Willard's bamboo room because they weren't there.

Jockey Club line-up: Bobby Leigh with personality songs; Jimmy Mulroe and Billy Kheuling, with fast tap dances, who are hillbillies on Joe Brown's amateur hour. Incidentally, Joe himself appeared there the other night. So did Archie Hawks, the tap artist. Music by Vic White and his melodians.

Music at the Cotton Club is played the way you like it. No matter how you like it, you'll hear it sooner or later. In addition, the floor show has its very good points—Amy Spencer repeats her fan dance, Vivian Baber and Sid Sisco have a way with them, Babe Wallace adds comedy and rhythm to his m. c. job. Music by Tommy Myles and boys.

Vivid murals, mirror rimmed snack bar, a singer and pianist, and all the hot rolls you want are available at the new Mayfair Restaurant, Cafe of All Nations. Only, don't rely on the geography of the murals, it's artistic in the extreme, but not so true to facts.

Judy Ellington continues to stop shows at the Lotus.

Police said Miss Dorsett died following an operation. Dr. Hart, veteran of 30 years' medical practice in Washington, was held in bond of $2,000.

Mrs. Stafford Tells of Trip To Greenland

Daughter of ExplorerPeary Speaks at Luncheon of Kiwanis Club.

Relating the experiences she encountered on her last trip to Greenland, during the summer of 1932, Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, author and lecturer, and only daughter of the Arctic explorer, Admiral Robert E. Peary, addressed local Kiwanians and their wives at a luncheon at the Mayflower yesterday. About 250 members and guests were present.

The purpose of her trip, Mrs. Stafford said, was to erect a 60-foot monument to the memory of her father. Sailing from New York in the 100-foot schooner of Capt. Robert ("Bob") Bartlett, accompanied by her two sons, she and her crew, because of the approach of adverse weather conditions, had to construct the monument in six weeks. Although critics had warned her the job could not be completed under any circumstances, the structure was finished in five weeks.

Touching upon the amusing phases, she told of a walrus hunt in which she and her sons took part. The experience of being adrift in a small whaleboat and resting against a cake of ice upon which 30 of the animals were grouped was described by Mrs. Stafford as not being "a particularly sane and restful experience."

What impressed the speaker most, she declared, was the fine spirit of loyalty and kindly assistance shown her by the Eskimaux, who had been associated with her father during his expeditions to the North Pole.

A trio headed by Sidney Seidenmann, of the Mayflower orchestra, presented a brief program of music during the luncheon.

Miss Ijams Explains Attack on First Lady

Berkeley, Calif., March 28 (AP).—Women in politics should limit their activities "merely to the interests of good government," Miss Martha Ijams said here today in explaining her recent criticism of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Miss Ijams, who had previously called Miss Perkins a "mere politician" and Mrs. Roosevelt a "headline seeker," refused to participate in a University of California charter day program last week because Miss Perkins was the principal speaker.

Federal Agent's Killer Ordered to Alcatraz

Chicago, March 28 (AP).—Within an hour after John Paul Chase was denied a new trial for the murder of Federal Agent Samuel P. Cowley, the Government today moved to confine him for the rest of his life in Alcatraz Prison.

Telegraphic instructions to remove the West Coast hoodlum direct to the island prison in the Pacific without the usual "seasoning" period in an inland institution were sent from Washington by Sanford Bates, Federal director of prisons.

"The Best Dog"—Scottish Terrier

Scottie Is Companionable, Courageous and Has Loads of Personality, Says Mrs. Irving Chambers; Her Sandy Mac Is Son of a Champion.

"I like a Scottie because he is quiet when you want him to be, companionable at all times, peppy and courageous," Mrs. Irving R. Chambers, wife of a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy, declared, as she discussed her favored breed in the living room of her home at 2905 Twenty-ninth street northwest.

Sandy Mac, Mrs. Chambers' first and present Scottie, is a celebrity indirectly, being the son of the international champion, Check and Double Check, that lovable Scottie made famous by Morgan Dennis and a well-known gasoline concern. "A Scottie is very independent," Sandy Mac's mistress continued the interview, while her sister, another rooter for this breed, chimed in from time to time. "You can not make up to a Scottie—he has got to make up to you. Sandy here, for some reason or another, did not like the lieutenant commander's father and mother at first. Whenever we would go out and leave him in the house with them, Sandy would make a bee-line for our bedroom and stay there until we arrived home again."

This little dog has had the unique experience of travelling with a circus, or a part of it, and he loved it. "When we came here from California, there was a lion and a tiger in the baggage car with Sandy, circus animals returning from a movie engagement. Sandy loved the lion so much that he used to wiggle out of his crate in order to get over in front of the beast and try to play with him. And when we took Sandy from the train at Indianapolis, he was heartbroken and bored throughout the rest of the trip.

"A scottie has just loads of personality," Mrs. Chambers added. "And they are one of the most lovable breeds I have known. As a breed, I know the scottie doesn't care to be held or petted. Sandy will never get into my lap unless he knows that I do not feel well. Then he will crawl up beside me and just beg for attention. There is something about him that cheers me up, just to look at him."

Mrs. Chambers declares that both the English and the Americans claim that better scotties are bred in this country now than anywhere else. They are bred with shorter legs, shorter bodies, and are not as heavy a dog as formerly.

Sister Waits April Visit Of Baroness

Frau von Schoen and Two Children Coming From Berlin.

Mrs. Finkenstaedt Will Greet Former D. C. Debutante at N. Y.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A former resident of Washington, Baroness von Schoen, will arrive in the Capital next month for a brief visit with her sister, Mrs. Edward L. Finkenstaedt. Baroness von Schoen has many friends in Washington, having lived here as a young girl and made her bow to society here not so many years ago. She was formerly Miss Katherine Birney, one of the three lovely Birney sisters. Mrs. Finkenstaedt and Mrs. Harold Walker are the other two.

The baroness will come from Berlin, where her husband, the newly appointed German Minister to Chile, has been at the foreign office for some time. Baron von Schoen is already en route to Santiago, where Baroness von Schoen and their two children will join him after their visit in Washington.

Former Attache Here.

Baron von Schoen was, before the World War, attache of the German embassy in Washington, and it was during that time he met his wife, then a Capital debutante. At the time of their marriage, the father of Baron von Schoen was German ambassador to Paris.

Mrs. Finkenstaedt will go to New York to meet her sister, who will arrive aboard the New York on April 19, and together they will return to Washington. The two young sons of the baroness are named Alexander Theodore and Hans, but the former has borne the nickname of "Barry," since his cousin, Aldace Walker, of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, saw him when he was a small child, and called him "Little Baron," from which Barry soon derived.

Baron von Schoen was until recently German Minister to Abyssynia, where he and his family spent several years, and before that he was Counselor of Legation in Pieping, China. Among the many friends of the baron and baroness who are planning informal entertainments for the latter during her stay in Washington is Mr. Clarence D. Hewes. He will entertain at dinner for the viistor shortly after her arrival here. Mr. Hewes has known the baron for many years, having first met him when the one was attached to the German Embassy here and the other assigned to the State Department. Later they were members of the staffs of their respective countries' legations in China, and even more recently Mr. Hewes saw the Von Schoens in Berlin.

To Entertain Parents.

Mr. Hewes will entertain at dinner on Saturday evening in his home on Massachusetts avenue for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hewes, of New Orleans and San Francisco, who will arrive in Washington today for a brief visit. Mr. and Mrs. Hewes will sail from New York April 6, to return to San Francisco via the Panama Canal. They have been spending the winter in New Orleans, where Mr. Clarence Hewes joined them for several weeks.

To return to Mrs. Finkenstaedt, she will have as her guest at her home in Georgetown, Mrs. Theodore Sizer, of New Haven, Conn., who will spend today and tomorrow here en route north from Chatham, Va., where she has been for several days.

What Today Means

"Aries."

IF MARCH 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

Self-reliance, as well as self-control, are two marvelous virtues to develop. Possessing them, you can face the world unafraid. Business conditions on this date will require your being alert. It probably will be very small things that large deals will be influenced by, so do not regard anything as being unworthy of your attention.

If a woman, and March 29 is your birthday, your keen sense of the ridiculous and ability to see a funny side to almost every situation, will enable you to face trials or tribulations successfully. Your happy disposition will attract many, make you popular, and be an asset in your business or social life.

You are capable of accomplishing some very worthwhile thing, and should possess moneymaking ability. You should be very fortunate in love. You possibly will have a great deal of sunshine come into your life in a very unexpected manner. Educational work, acting as hostess or saleswoman, receptionist or employed as secretary or librarian, may offer the best means for advancement.

If a man, and March 29 is your natal day, you may accomplish a great deal more if married than if single, as you probably require something of a deep emotional feeling to inspire your best efforts. Journalism, painting, teaching, or the practice of law, or medicine, may enable you to attain the position you wish.

Foreign Observers Who Think American Women Are Spoiled Overlook Multifarious Duties

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

AMERICAN women continue to be the spoiled darlings of the world in the eyes of foreign observers. Virtually every interview given by a visiting author or lecturer voices this refrain. These visitors, of course, are not to blame for this attitude. They get only a limited view of American life at a few cocktail parties and literary teas. Nevertheless, it is high time that American women rebelled long and loudly against such superficial pigeonholing.

• • • •

The American housewife, despite her bathroom and electrical gadgets, despite her hard-working (if he can get work) husband, has the most difficult job of any woman in the world. She faces a greater challenge than the housewife of any other country. Not only must she meet the most rigid standards of domestic efficiency, but she must face constantly increasing social and psychological demands.

• • • •

The housewife of almost any other country can settle herself into a good, comfortable, domestic niche and stay there. But not the American woman. She must be a chameleon to the end of her life. Let us consider some of the demands on the average "spoiled" American housewife:

SHE MUST be, in addition to a cook, a chemist and a dietician. She must keep up on the latest news of calories, vitamins and balanced menus. She must make a ritual out of children's meals. She must know the latest wrinkles in sanitation and be an expert on germs and drafts. She must also be an interior decorator and be able to transform a one-room studio into a Fifth avenue apartment or a four-room bungalow into an ancestral mansion.

• • • •

She must be, in addition to a nursemaid, an educator and a child psychologist. She must be alert to all the latest theories on complexes lest her children grow up into neurotics and charge her with ruining their lives. She must help them with their home work, see that they pass in their studies and that enough money is saved to put them through college.

She must be a fashionist and a beauty model. She must look as smart as her husband's secretary, as alluring as any siren he may meet in the business world. She must see that her own and her children's clothes look like those in fashion advertisements lest her friends feel sorry for her husband and his enemies say he is slipping.

• • • •

She must be a keeper-up with her husband. She must read newspapers, books, treatises on currency. She must be able to discuss intelligently anything from Mutt and Jeff to the gold standard. And as she gets older, she can not retire into fat and comfort but must look as young as her daughters so that her family may point to her with pride as a woman who "didn't let herself go."

SHE MUST be a professional entertainer. If she gives a party she must accept sole responsibility for its success. If she is in conversation with a man she can not expect him, like a European, to seek to interest her, but must devote her entire physical, mental and spirit energy to drawing him out and making him feel pleased with himself.

• • • •

She must also be a promoter. She must have her husband's boss to dinner and entrance him with her cooking and her conversation. She must meet her husband's sales prospects and so overwhelm them that they will sign on the dotted line. She must play bridge with quarrelsome women and listen to tales of boresome men that her husband's business may prosper.

She must be her husband's valet, clerk and office boy. She must see that his clothes are kept spruce, that his hair doesn't get thin in the back. She must do the family banking, stand in line to pay gas bills, see about the furnace and the water meter, keep track of the tax bills and insurance. She must answer her mother-in-law's letters, buy her husband's shirts and underwear and his presents for his Aunt Susie, protect him from gabby neighbors and from invitations to music recitals.

• • • •

She must, in short, be a miracle worker. No matter how great her handicaps, how small her income, she must in this democracy of ours see to it that her husband and children have as happy and healthful an environment, as great opportunity as any husbands or children in the land. And because she does this gayly and gallantly with head up, foreign visitors look upon her and remark how American women are spoiled. And men read these comments, swell their chests, and wonder if after all they aren't a little too easy on their women.

Mrs. Black Describes Southern Girls As Gracious, Responsive and Tactful

The Southern woman aspires to being pretty and pleasing. She likes to be told she's a "honey bunch" and "too cute for words," but true to the old traditions of the South, her ideals center around her home and husband in the opinion of Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of Senator Black, from Alabama.

Modern Cinema Version All Wrong, Says Wife of Senator.

North, South, East and West —all these present differences of ideals and culture. How are these reflected in the feminine personalities of these regions? This is the fourth article of a series on this subject.

By Frances Mangum.

PICTURE a flower-faced young woman in a wide-brimmed hat trimmed with frills and furbelows. She is surrounded by a dozen beaux and cooing with saccharine words—not forgetting the "yawl" and "honey chile."

That, according to modern cinemas is the Southern girl.

But, according to Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the Senator from Alabama, that isn't the Southern girl at all. She may wear wide-brimmed hats—why not? She may have a dozen beaux—more power to her. But she doesn't coo and her words aren't saccharine. And she doesn't say "yawl" when she means one person, and when she says "honey" she seldom adds "chile."

Says Old Traditions Prevail.

"But what is even more far-fetched," Mrs. Black said, "is that so many people think the Southern girl has no ideals aside from being cute and sweet. That's terribly wrong. I grant you that most Southern girls give a lot of thought toward being cute and sweet. They're brought up to think that's very important, and certainly the girl babies in the South from the time they're born are told they're sugar pies and honey bunches and just too cute for words. But ideals, now that's a different question entirely.

Mrs. Black believes that while the South has undergone many and extreme changes in the last half century, the old traditions of womanhood still prevail.

"I really believe," she continued, "that the ideals of a majority of young Southern women center around a home and a husband. You know down South girls are taught homemaking at an early age and it assumes far greater proportions than it does to lots of girls from other parts of the country."

Kindly Attitude Toward Life.

Mrs. Black laughed when she told how many persons asked her if the Southern girl's primer wasn't built around "Be pleasing." "And you know," she said, "I concede the point in part. As I said I do think Southern girls attach a great deal of importance to being pleasing but I think this springs from something that's quite deep and far from superficial. In fact, I believe it is an outgrowth of their very kindly attitude toward life.

"They say a lot of nice things to people—I believe they're noted for that. But I think it's absurd to think their words are sugar-coated. The real Southerner likes to pay compliments, likes to say nice things—and can't understand these being taken with a grain of salt."

In Mrs. Black's opinion there are three outstanding characteristics which may be attributed to the typical Southern girl. The first of these is graciousness, the second responsiveness, and the third, tact.

All Aspire to Popularity.

"Young women down South start going out at such an early age so they just naturally acquire these traits as they go along," she said. "They know that if they're to be popular—and every Southern girl aspires to popularity—they have to compete with others. As a result they acquire graciousness without knowing it. They love to have people come to their homes and they delight in visiting others. Isn't graciousness of manner a perfectly natural outgrowth?"

As for responsiveness. That didn't have to be explained. "It's just part and parcel of the Southern make-up," Mrs. Black laughed. "It is closely connected with Southern women's kindly attitude, their desire to please. I'd say it was a habit.

"And so is tact," she continued. "After all, tact is just being polite and not wounding others. If you feel sympathetic toward people and have a genuine liking for them you're bound to have tact."

What is the "Middle Western type?" Find the answer in tomorrow's Post in the fifth article of this series.

Tribeswoman in Washington to Appeal For U. S. Project on Montana Indian Lands

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF ALEXANDER POPE could travel through Montana today, his "Lo, the poor Indian!" would take on new significance.

A broad expanse of arid land. Cattle dying by the hundreds for lack of water. Three and four families crowded together in one-room log houses that dot the reservations. All these now constitute the outlook for Indians of the "Bitter Root" State, where not so long ago —when thousands of heads of cattle were doled out to the Red Man— there was a glimmer of hope for economic recovery.

This report was brought to Washington by Mrs. Dolly Cusker, a member of the Assiniboine Tribe (branch of the Sioux Nation). Mrs. Cusker came in the interest of obtaining Federal relief for the Indians on the Fort Peck Reservation. Formerly a member of the Montana Legislature, Mrs. Cusker was until recently assistant co-ordinator for the Indians and the State Relief Commission of Montana.

Indians Dislike Dole, She Says.

Her work in the latter capacity has given this handsome woman (whose high cheek bones, dark eyes and black hair reveal her Indian heritage) a wide knowledge of the needs of her people. Yesterday at the Powhatan she explained how the Indians of Montana could be assured economic independence.

"Indians don't want a dole; they want work," she said. "If we can get enough Federal relief to put through the Poplar River and other irrigation-projects, work for hundreds of Indians would be provided at once, and the cattle-raising industry, not only on Fort Peck but on other reservations, would be revived and eventually would make the Indians of Montana self-supporting."

She further explained that since there had been little rain for four years, many Indians had been forced to sell their furniture and other belongings in order to provide themselves with the barest necessities.

Tuberculosis Held Rampant.

"This is ominous because their living conditions were already wretched," she said. "Crowded homes are largely responsible for the fact 68 per cent of the Indians in Montana have tuberculosis."

This led to a discussion of welfare work among the Indians, and Mrs. Cusker expressed the opinion that much more effective results could be obtained if Indian women (instead of white ones) were trained to be field workers. She pointed out that requirements were so rigid that few Indians had been able to qualify as case workers.

"The major part of the field activity has, therefore, been carried on by white women," she said. "This is not nearly as satisfactory as it could be if Indians could meet the requirements and do the case work."

Tact Is Chief Need, She Asserts.

One of these requirements, she explained, was a college degree. "Yet it seems to me that tact and a knowledge of Indian pecularities are much more essential to being a good field worker," she said. "Indians feel they have been exploited so many times by white people, they are naturally distrustful of them, and are much more receptive to their own people. It is virtually impossible for a white person to 'get next to' an Indian. In view of this, it seems requirements for welfare workers among them should be less rigid."

Discussing other characteristics of her people, Mrs. Cusker mentioned the love of the Indian for his children. The most effective way to teach the Red Man is through his offspring, she said.

Mrs. Cusker also mentioned the strong influence Sioux women exert over their husbands. For though the matriarchy system (which still persists among the Navajos) is not strictly followed by the Sioux, the latter have great respect for opinions of their wives and mothers, she said.

Post Staff Photo.

Widely known among her people as the "Day Eagle Woman," Mrs. Dolly Cusker, of Poplar, Mont., is one of the outstanding Indian women in the United States. She spent the past week in Washington in the interest of obtaining Federal relief for Indians in drought-stricken areas.

4◇(2)	Pass	4♡(3)	Pass
4NT(4)	Pass	6◇(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—With 3 honor-tricks, even with balanced distribution a forcing takeout is necessary, for a game is certain and a slam probable.
2—With a minimum notrump, South would bid three notrump; but with 4½ honor tricks or more, he raises any minor suit takeout with A K x or A Q x.
3—This is an inferential force, and a slam try.
4—The conventional four notrump bid. (Note that South can no longer bid five notrump because it now requires the Kings of two bid suits.)
5—North can safely jump to a slam in diamonds, because he knows that South has at least A Q x.

The Play.

East opens with Jack of clubs, which North wins.

Principal points of the play:

1. North wins the first club and leads to the Queen of diamonds in dummy. This allows the bad break.

2. Before touching trumps again, North makes a percentage play in hearts. If the hearts are 3-3 he can safely lead three rounds; if the hearts are 4-2 and West has the four hearts, the fourth round can be ruffed with dummy's little diamond because West must follow and can not over-ruff. North cashes the Queen of hearts, then the King or hearts, then leads back toward the ace. When East shows out he ruffs a fourth heart with dummy's diamond 3. He now cashes the diamond Ace in dummy, and then takes the two remaining clubs, discarding his losing spade.

3. North next cashes dummy's Ace of spades and leads a low spade from dummy. At that point both North and West are reduced to nothing but trumps. If West ruffs the spade with the diamond 8, North overruffs with the nine and loses only one trick. If West ruffs with the diamond 10, North underruffs with the diamond 6. West must now lead a diamond and North has the K 9 over the J 8.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Ground Under Heel of Tyrannical Husband, Threatened With Loss of Children in Event of Separation, What Recourse Has Unhappy Wife?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: You seem to bring knowledge and wisdom to the solving of problems presented to you. I need both. Tell me what to do. I am most unhappy in my marriage. My husband seems to consider me not an individual at all, but just another human body to be directed by his will.

• • • •

I have no more authority in my family than any hired cook would have. If he decides to move into another house he tells me, and we move. If he decides that we shall take a vacation we take one when and where and for exactly as long as he chooses.

• • • •

If he wants a car or a radio he gets it. But if I want a piano or a washing machine it is a monstrous request. He has inherited money, but I do not know how much or how it is invested or where it is deposited or anything about it. He gives me barely enough money to buy food for the family, and if I want to go to a movie or have lunch downtown with a friend or buy a pair of stockings I have to ask for money for the specific purpose.

• • • •

Though I am a good driver I have no more use of the car than you have. All my interests are censored and if he does not approve I have to give them up or take the consequences. All of my friendships are censored and if he does not like my friends (and there are few that he tolerates) he makes it so uncomfortable for them and for me that I do not try to hold them, though some that I have lost I have dearly loved.

• • • •

He listens to every telephone conversation and when I am through criticizes what I have said and what my friend has said as he surmises it. I dread to hear the telephone ring when he is in the house. If I am out and stay a little longer than he estimates I ought to, he will not speak for the rest of the day. I can't go anywhere without permission.

• • • •

I can never make an engagement without first consulting him. I have tried it occasionally and on one pretext or another I always have to call my friend at the last minute and break it. I may say that all my friends are women. The most casual encounter with any man throws him into the blackest of moods. (I could tell you of a horror!) I could tell you pages but perhaps this is enough.

• • • •

Of course if there were nothing more to tell there would be no problem. I would not stay in his house long enough to pack a suitcase, even though I would not have carfare to the Union Station. But I have children. And in spite of the fact that he is an intolerable husband he is a good father. He gives the children a good home, good clothes. He willingly pays their doctor bills and the expenses of education, friendships and pleasures. He is considerate and affectionate toward them personally. And they are fond of him. They do not live in an atmosphere of strife and dissension. As long as I do exactly as he wishes we do not quarrel.

• • • •

The usual atmosphere in our home is one of quiet courtesy, because I am determined it shall be—no matter what forces are seething underneath. Oh, yes, I have tried privately and reasonably, I hope, to make some adjustment. But although he accuses me of being everything a man would not want his wife to be, if I suggest a separation which would deprive neither of us of the children, he says if I leave I will never get a cent from him and I will never get the children.

• • • •

I don't want any money for myself. I know I can earn my living somehow, but I can not risk losing my children. Is there anything I can do to save myself and not lose my children? UNHAPPY.

Call His Bluff.

DEAR UNHAPPY: Obviously, your husband is a case for psychiatric analysis and treatment. By that I do not mean to imply he is a lunatic. Not at all. But he is suffering from some overwhelming sense of inferiority to, and fear of losing, you. Hence his jealous possessive tyranny; his unsleeping surveillance of your every thought, action and reaction.

• • • •

You are probably making the mistake of judging him by normal patterns of behavior. You must learn to look at him as a doctor looks at a patient —through lenses of scientific and compassionate understanding—in order to comprehend and condone his otherwise incomprehensible and annoying behavior.

• • • •

It may be, however, that you have outlived every vestige of potential sympathy and responsiveness—mental, emotional and physical—ever felt for him. Your resources of patience, love and strength may be exhausted. In that case, adequate compatibility can never be restored, and your marriage is a shaky superstructure without foundation.

• • • •

Many wives, possessed of unconquerable spirit and a never-failing spring of love and understanding for their husbands, manage to live out comparatively satisfactory and happy lives with just such men as your husband. But that is because they consider the game worth the candle—economically, emotionally or socially —and because early in marriage they learned to play, with infinite wisdom and subtlety, a successful game of disarming and innocent domestic intrigue.

• • • •

Some women seem to have been made for such men, however; and it would be mistaken labor for another type of woman—candid, independent, forthright, disdainful of subterfuge; with ideals of equality and mutual respect and trust in marriage—to try by indirect means for ascendancy in such unspoken conflict.

• • • •

The latter type isn't content with the subversive ascendancy the first type accepts as satisfactory compromise. She expects equality and self-respecting freedom of action. She holds for a margin of decent reticence surrounding her thoughts and actions and preferences. Denied these things, she becomes annoyed, resentful, sullen, defiant, disagreeable, uncommunicative. Whereupon her husband, if he is such a man as yours is pictured, interprets her conduct as furtive, guilty, warranting distrust, investigation and circumscription. It's a vicious circle, best broken.

• • • •

While I respect and understand your wish to maintain an overt atmosphere of peace and dignity for the children's sake, nevertheless, it's possible they're undeceived. Children are psychic in apprehending the fundamental relationship existing between parents. You may be bending a silent if resistant neck to his yoke of petty tyranny to no avail; perhaps even at the expense of making him seem more deserving and you less, in their eyes, than the truth merits.

• • • •

His consideration for the children's pleasures and well-being may not mean he is a genuinely unselfish father. Rather, it may mean he is an astute politician, playing for votes in an anticipated battle for their custody. He may think that in buying their allegiance he is guaranteeing his dominance over you. A man is seldom fundamentally generous in one human relationship and viciously ungenerous in another.

• • • •

There is no painless remedy for your situation. You must either act to secure your legal freedom, taking a chance on gaining custody of the children or settle down to making the best of a bitter bargain. There is no middle course.

• • • •

Since your husband is a bully, in that he has threatened to deprive you of the children, he is probably also a coward; and if you called his hand fearlessly you might find yourself in control of the situation. If you stay without clarifying matters, held by the children, you may discover in years to come he has alienated their affections anyway. He is an insidious adversary by all accounts.

• • • •

I suggest you consult a lawyer and learn whether you stand to lose the children, as your husband threatens, in the event of separation. M. H.

New Kit Adds Luxury Touch To Daily Bath

Materials Supply Scent, But Also React to Invigorate Person.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE OLD ROMANS made the bath into a luxury and built marble pools which were filled with perfumed water. But we moderns, even without standard tubs, are not so far behind. We too are turning a plain, prosaic bath into a thrilling pleasure.

Promoting this new and better bath idea is a young woman famous for her splendid toilet preparations. Unlike many that are popular because of a pleasing fragrance, hers have won favor far and wide because of what they actually do for you.

For instance, take her new bath kit. It contains a mitt, a bottle of pine spirits, and some pine bath crystals. The mitt has two advantages. One side is rough to enable you to give your back and legs a thorough scrubbing that will cause the skin to glow and tingle with vitality. The other side is smooth so that you may use it on your arms and face with perfect comfort.

The second item in the kit is Vienna woods pine spirits, a body tonic, and an after-bath application. It is also an excellent deodorant. Not only that, if you rub yourself with it after a hard day of exercise it relieves fatigue and prevents muscular soreness.

The pine bath crystals are an invigorating blend of medicinal elements of sea and woods. They lend the actual fragrance of Vienna pines to your bath. As you know, this pine scent is one of the finest things in the world to give you a feeling of health and well being.

The kit, which includes these three items is beautifully packaged. When you first see it you'll think that it's another one of those luxuries just out of the budget's reach. As a matter of fact it's modestly priced.

"Twizzors" on Market.

Twizzors is the odd name of a new and different gadget which to all intents and purposes is a cross between tweezers and scissors. It was designed to enable you to do a more accurate job of plucking your brows—which in nine cases out of ten must be plucked to be pretty.

Twizzors has a handle just like scissors and points just like tweezers. You can obtain a perfect grip and remove the pestiferous little wild hairs from the outer edges of your brow far more quickly and easily than you've ever been able to before. The designer of the ingenous little instrument was careful to plan this gadget so that even while you hold it in your hand you can watch the tweezer points.

Bargain in Hassocks.

Imagine buying a hassock for only $1.39! And having that hassock monogrammed for no additional cost! You're skeptical already! You believe no such bargain exists? All doubters call at a large downtown store and you'll see the attractive little buys for yourselves.

They are made of a leatherette material which comes in two color combinations: Maroon and red; dark and light green; brown and tan, and blue.

There are two larger hassocks which range in price according to size.

If you're planning for a cottage at the beach you really should plan on a hassock, too. They serve dozens of needs being both footstool chair and table in one and at the same time giving a decorative touch to the room.

Easter Gift Suggestion.

Although Easter is still a little time off you might as well keep an eye open for attractive remembrances. You'll be bound to find a certain little gift suggestion quite irresistible. It's an attractive little bowl all wrapped in celophane. Inside are little stones and green moss. Hidden under these are narcissus bulbs. You remove your celophane covering take out the moss and stones, turn the bulbs right side up and pack the moss and stones around them. Now add a little water and put the tiny plants away in a dark, cool place to give them a chance to start growing. Before long they're sprouting by inches, and sooner than you'd dare believe you have a lovely full-grown plant—a perfect gift from a thoughtful giver.

Crab Salad.

If fresh crab meat is purchased, ask for some crab shells as these will make an attractive feature of your salad.

1 cup crab meat, fresh or canned
French dressing
Mayonnaise
Garnish of crab claws, hard cooked eggs, parsley, celery tops, cucumber rings and tomato slices.

Cut up an amount of celery equal to the crab meat. Marinate with French dressing. Place the mixture in the salad bowl, pour over the top a mayonnaise dressing and garnish with crab claws, hard cooked eggs, in alteration with bits of celery tops, cucumber and tomato slices.

Canned crabs make good salad. If there is any oil in the can, drain it off; sprinkle the crabs well with salt and vinegar and drain again before adding the dressing.

Safe Wiring In the Home Guards Health

Ordinary House Voltage Peril if Uninsulated, Dr. Cutter Warns.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ARE the electrical units used in your home safe? Are the wires properly insulated, securely connected; are the cords intact and free from wear? We have become so accustomed to the smooth performance of our electrical appliances that we are inclined to forget that they may cause damage to property or even endanger life if they are not in perfect working order.

Most Equipment Good.

Much of the equipment is manufactured of material sufficiently substantial to insure ample protection. On the other hand, some is offered at such a price that in order to permit profit to the manufacturer, the jobber and the retailer, construction must be so cheap as to make the articles potentially unsafe.

The ordinary household current of 100 to 110 volts can not be looked upon as entirely harmless, as evidence is accumulating that death may take place, in certain circumstances, from contact with current at this voltage.

Fatalities have been attributed to the powerful stimulating effect of the current and not to its heating or burning qualities. An electric current of even low voltage may strongly influence the heart. If applied directly to the ventricles of the heart regular beating stops—that is, no general contraction of the heart muscle occurs. Instead, isolated muscle fibers contract, but their activity is without effect; no blood is pumped and there is stoppage of the circulation. When the body is in contact with an electric current some will reach the heart and the damage done will depend upon the amount.

Bathroom Danger.

The normal dry skin possesses a high resistance to electricity, but if the skin is wet or if the individual is perspiring or has superficial injuries such as cuts and scratches, resistance is markedly lowered. Bathroom fatalities due to the electric current are not unknown. While in the tub an individual may turn on an electric light or a bathroom heater, the connections of which have become worn so that there is a leakage of current to the fixture. From this contact the person may receive a large amount of electricity, the bath water and plumbing fixtures acting as a ground.

No electrical device should ever be touched with a wet hand—no matter how well insulated it may appear to be. We may do so perhaps a thousand times without danger, but the next contact may be attended with untoward results.

THREE MEN and DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WHEN they had been married for more than a year, and Christmas was upon them again, Neal told Diana he had talked to a lawyer about the possibility of little Michael's grandparents taking him.

"He says that the getting a license to get married was in effect a contract, Di. Not a legal marriage, but enough to force the Palmers to recognize the kid."

Diana said nothing. She held the child against her heart. Her face was infinitely tired.

Three nights later, between matinee and evening performance, Neal brought his lawyer friend home for dinner "to talk about this Palmer business."

"Hello, Di." His two big hands were over hers; the fine white teeth she remembered showed in a smile, but his keen yes were not smiling.

"Peter Platt! I didn't know you were Neal's lawyer!"

"Didn't he tell you?"

"I'd forgotten you knew each other," Neal explained, in the doorway, with his hair wet and a towel at his dripping face.

Peter Understood.

He had been in Washington with Senator Cope, he knew New York; he had just been offered a junior membership in the firm of Bauer & Martin. Bauer & Martin? Diana raised impressed eyebrows. This was recognition indeed.

After dinner, when Neal was gone, she drew his chair near to her own, under the lamp, and sat facing him, her eyes traveling over him wistfully, the right words somehow hard to find.

"You don't want to give up Michael," Peter stated rather than asked, after a moment. Diana looked at him, looked quickly away, and he saw her blue eyes brim suddenly with tears, and the thick lashes lowered.

"You're infinitely restful, Peter. I'm so glad you're here."

"I think I've been hoping, all my life, that some day I'd be of some use to you, Di."

Peter came up again to talk to Diana about the Palmers' offer to take litle Michael; they sat in Diana's dreary little parlor, Peter staring for the most part at the coal fire, as he talked, but now and then glancing up to smile at her his remembered smile.

They Went to Lunch.

After his second call he took her to lunch at the St. Francis. They walked the half-dozen sunshiny blocks together, and Peter bought her gardenias.

When he came to report a day or two later the same icy wave went over her again; as Diana met him she was trembling so that she had to put out a hand to the stairway rail to balance herself. She was conscious only of feeling that he must see nothing — he mustn't guess—

If she could only have found excuses for daily telephone messages! But Michael's little affair was only too simply arranged.

His grandparents wanted him, "for a long visit;" his Lottie was to go with him. Neal, in his ugliest, most sullen mood, was counting the moments until the child left the house. Diana had no choice.

"How is Neal?" Peter asked a few days later.

"Very difficult," Diana said simply. "He doesn't like his part, he's—going too much——"

"You punish yourself, Di."

He Was a Problem.

"I punish myself whatever I do. I seem to have been born to punish myself. But I must—I must walk this way, now—now while Neal is so—so strange about it. Not sane, no. But I married him—I married him twice, as he is," Diana said. "He is my problem now. He loves me—in his way——"

"His way," Peter reminded her strongly, as she hesitated again, "is a way that leaves you plenty of loopholes if you want one, Di. He has driven you almost into nervous breakdown—he wants to separate you from your child—he is not, you know it—you know he is not——"

"Faithful," she supplied absently. "Yes, I know. But this—this is what I have to do now: I have to keep Neal happy, give him no excuse to say that I didn't do what I could to save our marriage this second time——"

She turned, looking away from him up the foggy street, and he saw that she was crying.

Silence lay like a wall of darkness between them.

"Good night, Peter, and thanks so much for coming for me. It saved my life! I was just—just missing Michael so horribly——"

"Good night, Di. See you very soon!"

She Called Peter.

On a certain Sunday she telephoned him in Sausalito.

"Peter—this is Diana. I have company this morning. Who do you think's here?"

"Not Micky?"

"Yes, Friday, when I was alone—Neal's gone until Monday night—I just took a chance and went down to Bayhead."

"And they were nice to you?"

"They were adorable!"

There was a moment of silence; she could hear her heart beat.

"You'll cover over to lunch, of course," Peter said then in a tone she had never heard from him before.

Diana turned from the telephone, sank on her knees beside Micky's position high in pillows in an armchair. Laughing for sheer ecstasy, she buried her flushed face in his firm little brown neck; kissing him, holding him off at arm's length, jerking him to her again.

A Wonderful Day.

Later Peter and she and the child went up to the quiet hills and heard the larks start up in the grass with their heart-piercing cry, and saw the white ships crossing and recrossing the bay.

Peter lay in the grass beside her, sometimes raising his face to look at her, sometimes dropping his head deep into the sweet greenness. They talked, were silent, talked again.

"Neal gets home tomorrow?" he asked.

"Tomorrow afternoon. And Micky and Dottie go back in the morning. I'll take no chances. But oh," Diana said fervently, "to have had him, to know that I can have him again sometimes, is like coming out into the most exquisite sunshine after a tunnel that I thought would never end. I don't mind anything now! They were so kind to me—the Palmers—they talked of Bruce, and we all cried."

"And all the sunshine down at the Palmers'—and this," she said. "But my heart won't go back there!"

There was a long silence. Then suddenly Diana stirred.

"We ought to go back to the house, Pete. I've to get this little gent home for his supper."

"Shame to have to go in." The exquisite spring afternoon was mellowing toward its close.

"When—when do I see you, Pete?" she asked later as she stood at the bungalow window.

Along the Trail

Sites of Indian Potentate's Villages at Occoquan, Va., Will Be Visited by Wanderbirds Sunday; Itinerary Includes Pirate's Cove.

By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club will hearken back the days of Capt. John Smith and the great King Powhatan Sunday, when they visit the sites of the Indian potentate's villages at Occoquan, Va., and view the old gristmill and mill races which served this region in the seventeenth century. The spring plowing and rains probably will uncover many Indian artifacts in the fields along the route—objects for which curio collectors will be on the lookout. On the steep slopes of the ravine in the vicinity of Occoquan Falls the hikers will have an opportunity to find nearly a score of varieties of early spring flowers.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this easy 7-mile hike will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. for the 28-mile bus trip to Occoquan. The fare is 70 cents for the round trip and reservations must be made at National 4200 by 9 a. m. Sunday. Hikers are urged to bring along lunch and a cup for water.

Itinerary of Hike.

Starting from the Occoquan Creek Bridge, the group follows the crumbling mill race for one-half mile to the falls, passing the old gristmill on the way. Lunch will be had at a spring near the falls at an exceptionally scenic spot. Returning to the highway, the group will visit the picturesque village of Occoquan at the far side of the bridge. This colonial town is located at the head of tidewater and is the end of the old Indian trail which leads from the deposits of native copper in Loudoun County, originally worked by the Indians and later by the colonists.

The group will again board the buses for the 3-mile ride to Woodbridge, from which point they will tour the nearby Indian country and visit the famous Pirate's Cove.

This region was the domain of the Tauxenants Tribe, a member of the Powhatan Confederacy. The name Occoquan is of Indian derivation and means "curved expansive water"—referring to the gentle curvature of Occoquan Bay. The fertile land about the bay was probably thickly populated, since thousands of stone implements have been found there in the past few decades. Arrow points and ax heads can be found often in freshly plowed fields, particularly after rains.

Weather-Beaten Tombstone.

The dirt road leading from Woodbridge ends in the vicinity of the Pirates Cove, on the Potomac below the bay. A slab of sandstone upon which is chiseled a much-weathered skull and cross-bones has been found nearby. Beneath it one could barely decipher the date "17—" and a blurred "Capt. ——." It is believed that a buccaneer chief probably lies beneath this weather-beaten tombstone.

From Pirates Cove the route follows a dirt road to Featherstone, where the buses will await the group. Hikers probably will be back in Washington by 7 p. m., in time for a late dinner.

The Red Triangle Outing Club plans a week-end trip to the Massanutten Mountains. The group will meet at Seventeenth and New York avenue northwest at 2 p. m. Saturday. The total cost will be $1.25. The Sunday hike will be up a high peak from which a view of the Blue Ridge and the Shenandoah Valley may be had. Reservations may be made through Phil McCrea, 2109 F street northwest, apartment 209.

Legislators Unite In Maryland Move For Lotteries Vote

Action Still Incomplete, Parallel Measures Being Favored.

New Bill Permits Two State Events

Senate's Approval Will Call for Referendum at 1936 Election.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 28.—Both Houses of the Legislature today were on record as favoring submitting the question of lotteries to the voters, although a measure for this purpose has not been enacted.

The House, after a short debate, passed an amended bill, presented by Delegate Philip J. Wallace (Democrat), Baltimore, which proposes a constitutional amendment to empower the Legislature to authorize two State lotteries annually for the benefit of State-owned and State-aided schools and hospitals.

If the bill is passed by the Senate the amendment would be voted upon in the 1936 general election and the 1937 Legislature would have to act to authorize the lotteries.

The Senate has passed a bill, introduced by Senator Joseph M. Wyatt (Democrat), Baltimore, which proposes a constiutional amendment designed to strike the present prohibition against lotteries from the State constitution. The House has not acted upon this measure.

Opposed On Floor.

The Wallace lottery bill went through the House with a 77-to-34 vote after being opposed on the floor by Delegates Charles Carroll, jr. (Democrat), Howard County, and Charles C. Marbury (Democrat), Prince Georges County. Delegate Daniel Chambers (Democrat), Fifth Baltimore District, and Delegate Paul L. Cordish (Democrat), Fourth Baltimore District, made a floor fight for its passage. Numerous other delegates interrupted the debate to fire questions at speakers.

Delegate Carroll termed the measure "bad legislation." He asserted that about $6,000,000 of American money was placed on the Irish Sweepstakes, but only $1,000,000 was won by residents of this country.

Delegate Chambers pointed out that "a lot of money" is going out of the country on lotteries. He said the bill would bring in considerable revenue.

Delegate Cordish declared the question should be submitted to the voters for their decision. Delegate John A. Novak (Democrat), First Baltimore District, took the same position.

Delegate Marbury cited the "abuses" of the Louisiana lottery. He was interrupted by questions designed to show that considerable money was being bet with bookmakers and lotteries without legal authority.

Insurance Bill Beaten.

The House defeated a bill which would have required all persons who desire to become salesmen of ordinary life insurance to take an examination for a license. The examination fee was set at $10 and the test would have been given by the State insurance department.

After defeating by a 76-to-30 vote an effort to send the bill back to the insurance and loans committee, the House cast a 54-to-53 vote for the final passage of the bill. It failed to pass, as it lacked seven votes of the required constitutional majority.

Another controversial measure, "the fireworks bill," was amended. A favorable report was adopted and it was ordered printed for third reading and final passage.

The bill originally would have required persons desiring the use of fireworks to obtain a $5 license from the court clerks of their counties or Baltimore City. As amended the bill prohibits the sale or barter of fireworks to any minor under 18 years of age. Parents could give fireworks to their minor children at their own responsibility.

During the debate, Delegate William S. Wilson (Demcorat), Baltimore, referred to the number of children injured by fireworks and declared:

"The eyesight of one child in the State is worth more than all the money the fireworks companies can make in all time to come."

Power Plant Bill Meets Opposition

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 28.—Opposition, somewhat unexpected, developed today to the bill paving the way for a municipally-owned power plant at Cumberland. The measure, sponsored by Senator Robert B. Kimble, Allegany County, and passed by the Senate several days ago, authorized a bond issue of $2,000,000, subject to a referendum, and would empower the mayor and council to sell electric power within a radius of 30 miles.

The bill is now before the House. The opposition came from a large group of business men of Cumberland at a hearing of the judiciary committee of that body. A brief setting forth several objections to the proposal was filed.

The committee was told the bill is not a local measure and that a commission appointed a year ago to study the subject urged that rate cuts ordered by the Public Service Commission be tried out and that there was no recommendation for or against the plant project. It was pointed out current now is supplied on a county-wide basis, that the Potomac Edison Co. pays a gross tax of $6,000 and State revenue therefore would be affected.

Objections Listed.

The brief cited that bond issue would increase the city's bonded indebtedness by approximately 50 per cent; that the majority of 5,000 citizens who have signed petitions against the bill are taxpayers; that the Potomac Edison Co. employs more than 200 persons in Cumberland whose positions would be endangered.

The Senate today approved a committee report on a bill placing petty loan companies under direct supervision of the State banking commissioner. The measure was introduced by Senators Kimble, of Allegany County, and Duncan, Baltimore County. It does not affect rates charged by the companies, but provides for a commission of three to make a thorough study and report to the next General Assembly in 1937. The Governor, president of the Senate, and speaker of the House, each would appoint a member of the commission.

The bill is a compromise measure resulting from many hearings. It provides that companies may attach only 5 per cent of the wages of borrowers, as compared with the present allowance of 10 per cent.

Proposal Passed.

The House Judiciary Committee returned a favorable report on the bill by Delegate Carrico, Charles County, placing motor vehicles, tractors, threshers and other machinery under the "property clause" of general law, wilful destruction of which would be a misdemeanor.

That distribution of the gasoline tax fund for lateral roads in the several counties will continue under jurisdiction of the State Roads Commission for two more years was rendered practically certain tonight when the House passed to third reading the Senate bill carrying such provisions. Prior to this the House killed, by adoption of an unfavorable report, the so-called county commissioner's association bill, which sought to have these funds paid direct to the county treasurers.

David Robb Named Judge By Gov. Nice

Cumberland Attorney to Succeed Doub in Fourth Circuit.

Commission Presented; Will Take Office On April 12.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 28.—Gov. Nice today appointed and commissioned David A. Robb, Cumberland attorney, to be judge of the Fourth Judicial Circuit, to succeed Judge Albert A. Doub, also of Cumberland, who will retire from the bench April 11 when he will reach the age limit of 70 years. Judge Robb will take office the following day.

Mr. Robb came to Annapolis today at the request of the Governor, and the executive personally presented his commission to him, and extended felicitations, declaring his elevation to the bench would benefit residents of the State.

Mr. Robb is 59 years old, married, and has one daughter. He has long been in public life, having served two terms as city solicitor of Cumberland, one as State's attorney of Allegany County, and represented his county in the State Senate at the assembly sessions of 1922 and 1924, during which he led the fight for a State-wide dry law. He was the Republican candidate for attorney-general in 1930, but was defeated by W. Preston Lane, jr., Democrat, of Washington County.

This was the first appointment to the judiciary Gov. Nice has been called upon to make. There will be another vacancy soon when a special act of the current legislature will retire Judge Nicholas H. Green, of Anne Arundel County, because of continued impaired health. Judge Green, a Democrat, has served less than two years, but at the last November election he was elected for the full term of 15 years. He was stricken before the election.

Many Croakers Caught By Chesapeake Crews

Mathews, Va., March 28 (AP).—Big catches of croakers have been reported here by Chesapeake Bay fishermen, although the "run" is not due until after the middle of June. Inhabitants of this village say they do not remember when this variety of fish has appeared so early in the year. One fisherman is reported to have caught 85 bushels of croakers, considered a good catch at any time of the year.

Fishermen also are catching a few shad, up to a dozen in a net. Catches are said better than in any season in the last three or four years.

Frostburg to Extend Its Water System

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., March 28.—The Mayor and city council are planning to extend Frostburg's water system to Eckhart and Mount Savage. They have laid a plan before Abel Wolman, State engineer of the PWA, and report he has promised cooperation.

New Postmaster

ROBERT E. FIFER.

Fifer May Start Duties Monday As Postmaster

Temporary Staunton Berth Likely Pending Action of Senate.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., March 28.—While definite indication has not been given as to when Robert E. Fifer will take over the postmastership in Staunton, there is a probability that he may step in as acting postmaster on April 1.

Following the unanimous indorsement by the city Democratic committee, no time was lost in communicating the recommendation to Representative A. Willis Robertson of the Seventh Virginia District; and the Representative promptly certified Mr. Fifer's name to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Because the commission of the Republican incumbent, J. J. Kivlighan, expired February 14, it is anticipated that the Postmaster General will give Mr. Fifer a temporary appointment at once, pending approval of the President's recommendation by the Senate. Mr. Kivlighan sent his resignation to Mr. Farley last week.

As a postoffice quarter ends March 31, it is believed that Mr. Fifer may be asked to take charge here April 1.

In the indorsement of Mr. Fifer, regarded as a "dark horse" among nine applicants, the committee turned thumbs down on three other eligibles—George A. Cottrell, former mayor, who, with Mr. Fifer, had been certified by the Civil Service Commission as eligible, because of business qualifications, and C. H. Vint and W. H. Keller, respectively, assistant postmaster and superintendent of mails in the Staunton postoffice. They were eligible because of their civil service classification.

Mr. Fifer was born in Lynchburg 45 years ago, but has been a resident of Staunton since he was 2 years old. He is a son of Mrs. Elva Fifer, of this city, and the late G. M. Fifer. He was educated in the public schools here and graduated from Dunsmore Business College. For a quarter of a century, until he resigned, March 1, Mr. Fifer was connected with the W. J. Perry Insurance Corporation, for the last 20 years as secretary-treasurer. He is a member of Clemmer-McGuffin Post, American Legion.

The incoming postmaster is not married.

VERA Plans Cooperative Work Center

Number of Communities Due to Get Varied Enterprises.

Exchange, Sale of Goods or Services Aim of New Program.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 28.—Work centers, which will produce goods or services for use, exchange or sale on a cooperative basis are being planned in a number of Virginia communities, the rural rehabilitation division of the VERA disclosed today.

These enterprises will include canneries, grist mills, wood working shops, broom factories, tanneries, etc., and will be operated by and for the joint benefit of individual localities and their neighboring rural rehabilitation families.

The local community will furnish all it is able to provide in the way of funds, land, buildings and equipment, but, otherwise, the projects will be financed through the rural rehabilitation division of VERA. Later, local cooperatives will have the privilege of buying the centers outright out of the profits of the enterprise.

The primary function of the centers will be to provide cooperatively services or goods for use or exchange. However, commercial operations may be engaged in where there is not already an overproduction.

Besides furnishing goods and services needed in the communities and supplemental employment to rural rehabilitation families, the work centers will serve also as recreational and vocational education centers. Small libraries ultimately will be included in each.

The centers will be established through the assistance of local citizens' committees and operated by local cooperative corporations, composed insofar as possible of rehabilitants, which will lease the land and equipment from the Virginia Rural Rehabilitation Corporation. The latter will retain title to the property and authority over the project until its expenditure in setting up the project will have been liquidated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 28.—J. H. Chiles, superintendent of schools in Spotsylvania County, today said he believed that through the Virginia Emergency Relief educational program, illiteracy in the county will be entirely wiped out within the next two years.

The work, a phase of national relief for the benefit of unemployed teachers, in addition to teaching adults, literate and illiterate, was carried on in the county last year under the direction of Supt. Chiles alone. Engaged were seven white and seven colored teachers, who taught in as many locations those over 16 years of age, a number of whom were illiterate.

The groups, according to the teachers, advanced rapidly. It is estimated at least 200 people took advantages of the classes during the year.

This year the superintendent has a supervising assistant, Miss Jeanette M. Hess. Nine white and eight colored teachers are now being used.

Farm Rally Scheduled Tuesday at Salisbury

Salisbury, Md., March 28 (AP).—A county-wide meeting of farmers will be held in the courthouse here on Tuesday under the auspices of the Wicomico County Farm Bureau. Charles E. Cockey, State president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, will be one of three speakers.

April 6 Rally Of G.O.P. Set For Roanoke

Virginia Delegates to Urge Unity in Resolution.

Dickinson Is Listed as Guest; McComac Is Chairman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., March 28.—A Republican conference bringing together nearly 300 delegates from all over Virginia will meet here April 6 to discuss plans and resolutions to be forwarded to the national Republican Party, it was announced today by State Republican officials.

Phillip P. Campbell, former member of the House of Representatives from Kansas, now a resident of Arlington County, will sound the keynote. Other prominent Republicans, including Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa; Col. Henry Anderson, of Richmond, one-time candidate for Governor of Virginia; Joseph C. Cupper, Arlington County, and H. B. McCormac, of Winchester, will attend.

McCormac has been named chairman of the conference, and Mrs. Felix M. Parks, Roanoke, chairman of the Republican Women of Virginia, will have charge of the arrangements.

Grayson Ahalt, active chairman of Arlington County Republicans, tonight stated that he would be accompanied here by 20 delegates. Other counties will send two or three delegates.

"The conference will be very similar to those meeting held in the West," Ahalt explained. "It is purely for the initial forming of plans and resolutions so closer unity of the party may be enjoyed when the time comes to adopt a national platform." The conference will be the first meeting of its kind since last year's meeting in Richmond, when Representative Hamilton Fish, New York, spoke.

Apple Blossom Fete Is Hastened

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 28.—Officials for the twelfth Apple Blossom Festival today speeded preparations as they heard experts announce that warm weather has caused buds on more than 11,000,000 apple trees in the Shenandoah, Potomac and Cumberland fruit belts to develop more rapidly than usual.

That the blossoms may be in full bloom a week earlier than last year was the prediction of T. B. Byrd, chairman of the executive committee, who, with Dr. Walter S. Hough, entomologist of the Winchester Research Laboratory, determines the date of the festival.

"All I can say," Dr. Hough declared, "is that the apple trees are going to bloom in April."

Both he and Mr. Byrd asserted that if the warm weather continues, the festival will have to be held considerably earlier. Usually it has been held during the first week in May.

Under the new set-up each community and each organization is to have a representative on the chapter council to frame its program. Speakers included Capt. Charles Caulkins, district CCC captain, and John L. Teets, field representative of the American Red Cross. Morris Spiro, city councilman and chairman of the Rockingham chapter, presided.

First aid and accident prevention will be two of the major objectives of the chapter during the coming year. The American Red Cross will hold classes for instructors here in April.

Church Head Endangered By Explosion

Pastor Narrowly Escapes Injury in Furnace Blast.

Sunday School Room of Building Damaged in Frederick.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 28.—The Rev. Ralph M. Sharpe narrowly escaped injuries today as an explosion of oil in the furnace of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church South, damaged the building.

The explosion occurred 15 minutes before a meeting of the Frederick-Montgomery Zone Conference of the Women's Missionary Societies of the denomination was scheduled to open. The meeting was transferred to the United Brethren Church nearby.

Three window sashes were blown out of the rear wall of the Sunday school room of the Trinity Church and over the head of Mr. Sharpe, who was standing beside the furnace when the blast occurred.

Charles A. Kirschman, the janitor, who had been bending over the oil box a few minutes before, had left to get a wrench for tightening a belt. He had been having trouble with the furnace.

Members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, who were in an adjoining room preparing tables for serving lunch, were not endangered but the table linen was blackened by smoke, which penetrated the auditorium upstairs. Several window panes were blown out.

Gardiner Indicted On Liquor Charge

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 28.—George L. Gardiner, chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Howard County, was indicted today by the Federal grand jury on a charge of possessing illegally a quantity of liquor at his home near Clarksville.

Gardiner was arrested March 14 after investigators of the alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau had raided the Gardiner home and farm, where they said they seized approximately 61 gallons of liquor.

Government agents at a hearing before United States Commissioner James J. Cullen testified that one of them, James London, had purchased a jar of liquor from Gardiner several days before the raid.

Gardiner is at liberty under $1,000 bond, awaiting trial on the charge in United States District Court.

Cecil Preparing Plans For Proposed School

E. William Martin and Ralph A. Jeffers, of Wilmington, Del., are the architects. Although funds for the project are not available now, hope was expressed the work would be financed by the county commissioners and the Public Works Administration.

Shenandoah's Spelling Finals Will Benefit County Library

Small Fee to Be Charged at Contest to Decide Area Winners.

The Shenandoah County, Va., finals in the national spelling bee, sponsored in this area by The Washington Post, will serve a dual purpose. In addition to encouraging the study of spelling in elementary grades, the match will benefit the county library. An admission fee of 5 cents will be charged, the proceeds to go to the libary.

This arrangement was made at the suggestion of C. V. Shoemaker, county superintendent of schools. As in other counties, school champions, selected by principals or teachers in charge of elementary grades, will take part. The match promises to arouse interschool rivalry to high pitch. It will be held early in May, the time and place to be announced later

The county library contains approximately 1,200 volumes, in constant circulation. The demand for books has increased constantly.

The library contains many reference volumes for students. They are taken out by rural supervisors and left in a school two or three weeks, then transferred to another school. In addition, there are about 300 books in the professional library at the disposal of the teachers.

Thirty-two counties in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia are eligible in the national spelling bee. The Post will give two books of reference in each county match and the Encyclopedia Britannica Junior as first prize in the area finals. Second prize in that match will be the four-volume Champlin's Young Folks Cyclopedia. The winner of the area finals will compete against champions from other parts of the country for $1,750 in cash prizes and the spelling championship of the United States.

Leaflets giving contest details will be sent out upon request, by Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, The Washington Post.

New Sound Equipment Is Installed at RKO-Keith's as Gesture Toward Modernism

New Gadgets A Great Forward Step in Artistry

Clarify Audible Qualities; Parties Are on the Way; Amusement Chatter.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It will not be entirely that your hearing is improving.

I mean when you attend RKO-Keith's Theater these next few days you will be the beneficiary of something beyond any mere physical improvement on your part. All that hammering and pulling and hauling that has annoyed you around the corner of Fifteenth and G streets has been the normal rumpus attending the installation of new sound equipment which is promised for complete and satisfactory operation not later than Sunday, March 31.

With a degree of braggadocio quite beyond the usual modest reaches of his reticence, Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's is making it known around the dramatic desks that his new giant loudspeaker, capable of reproducing the entire range of audible frequencies—whatever they are—has been installed behind the porous screen from which the commotions of the cinema emanate and that, with its new soundhead and high quality amplification in the projection booth, is capable of registering the greatest improvement in the recapturing of noises since audibility came to the silver sheet in the late summer of 1926.

That, of course, remains to be seen—and heard—but Master Meakin has a tremendous amount of technical corroboration at his seeming command.

Progress Has Been Rapid.

Among other things, Master Meakin suggests that technical progress in the recording of sound for the cinema has been so rapid and so splendidly defined these past nine years that old-time equipment just simply will not deliver the right rackets.

Whereas, previous systems have been able to reproduce tones as low as 100 cycles and as high as 6,000 of the same, at the most, the new RCA-Victor gadgets, with which RKO-Keith's is being stuffed, can faithfully reproduce tones as low as 60 cycles and as high as 10,000.

I don't know even approximately what they are, but that sounds like an awful lot of cycles to me!

The volume range—we confess to being so far over our head in this mechanical discussion that we are not even vaguely conscious of where it comes out—too, has been improved so that the merest whisper of the wind, sighing through the grass, or the great crescendo of a symphony orchestra may be made to fall upon the listening ear with equal fidelity.

The development of this new High Fidelity System strikes one with some awe as the culmination of years of persistent research and experiment on the part of a group of engineers with a background of more than 30 years of acoustical experience.

It was this same group, one learns with a slight catching of the breath, who were responsible for most of the major advances in radio broadcasting and in marine and transoceanic communications.

Good for Fourth Week.

With the installation of this new outfit of widgets, Manager Meakin coyly suggests that it will be even easier than usual to hear every tap of Fred Astaire's dancing, every smothered murmur of Ginger Rogers' Gallic emotionalism and every note of Irene Dunne's splendid singing during the fourth consecutive week of his splendid run of "Roberta."

We wouldn't go too much for this pother. It sounds a little like press-agentry!

There might, however, be some basis in fact for the claims that all this mechanical flubdub represents a cash outlay in excess of $10,000. When the Metropolitan Theater took its place as the first sound-equipped picture house in the Capital, the cost was in the neighborhood of $24,000—the very immediate neighborhood, if I may say so.

Now, how about those new seats you have been prating about so exhaustively, Mr. Meakin? Oh, so you don't remember that item, eh? Well, probably you wouldn't.

A week from tomorrow, that would be Friday, April 5, if Mr. La Falce, of the Warner Brothers' local publicity department, has his glasses on straight, the personality scheduled to headline the stage goings-on at the Earle Theater will be Hugh Herbert, one of the drollest of the gelatin buffoons.

Mr. Herbert's introduction to "show business," as it is so quaintly called, occurred a quarter century or so ago, and was under the managerial guidance of a young man by the name of Sidney B. Lust, whom you may recall as foremost—or thereabouts—of the Capital's motion-picture exhibitors.

It is expected that there will be red fire, dancing in the streets and lusty singing of "Auld Lang Synes" when the Messrs. Lust and Herbert get together.

I'm afraid there will have to be more of this later.

Singer Coming.

Heralded as one of the finest singers of our time, Carlton Gauld, an American basso who has been singing leading roles in the Opera Comique of Paris for the last three years, will give a recital in the National Theater on Thursday afternoon, April 4, under the management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, so I am told by my confrere, Mr. Ray C. B. Brown. Mr. Gauld is appearing in place of Feodor Challapin, the Russian basso, whose scheduled recital here has been canceled because of illness.

Mr. Gauld, who is visiting his native land on leave of absence from the Opera Comique, will make no other appearance in America this season, as he will sail for France on April 6.

His program will open with three operatic excerpts: "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves," from Handel's "Scipio;" Charon's aria from Lully's "Alceste," and Leporello's aria from Mozart's "Don Giovanni." He will also sing a group of French songs, four numbers from Schumann's cycle, "Dichterliebe;" two Schubert lieder, and American songs by O'Hara, Margetson, Kramer and Fisher. Alderson Mowbray will be the accompanist.

Announcement is made that tickets purchased for the Chaliapin recital will be honored at the door.

It is the brilliant virtuosa of the violin, Elena de Sayn, president of the Slavic-American Society, who holds the thoroughly tenable position that there are many Washingtonians who would be interested in knowing that Lasar Galpern will lecture here Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Sulgrave Club, 1801 Massachusetts avenue, on the topic of "The Stage Arts in Europe."

Formerly of the Moscow Art Theater, Mr. Galpern has been continuously before the public as artist, ballet-master, stage director and producer of elaborate presentations in the leading theaters of Russia, Germany, Italy and France.

In New York City his production of Scriabine's ballet, "Sonata," at the opening of Radio City Music Hall, and that of the massic spectacle, "The Romance of the People," gained for him instant American recognition of his extraordinary gifts.

As founder of the Theater of Young America, New York City, he was sponsored by such personages as Prof. John Dewey, Albert Einstein, Daniel Frohman, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Father Finn, Sir Philip Greet, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, Mrs. Leopold Stokowski, Martha Graham, Agnes De Mille, presidents of many girls' schools and other educational groups.

"Tra-la-la."

Spring flowers, some growing in model garden spots, others cut and entrancing in a gala display, will crowd into the spacious lobbies of Loew's Fox Theater on Friday morning of this week for the fourth annual garden and floral exhibit conducted by the theater management.

This, the only event of its sort presented in Washington annually, is receiving the sponsorship of the Washington Better Housing Campaign, under direction of J. K. Gilchrist. Their exhibit will feature model houses and communities, including several recently completed by the Architectural Club of Central High School, which have been the subject of much interest and praise.

The campaign also will conduct a booth for the free distribution of literature on garden topics and printed leaflets describing its local landscaping plans.

The model gardens will include a "Rockery and Fish Pond," featuring rare species of gold fish, by Leissler's Nurseries; "Corner in a Naturalistic Garden," by the Gude Garden Shop; "Waterfall and Lily Pond," by Fred Drew and Leissler's Nurseries, and "Evergreen Variations," by John J. Hughes.

Requiem Note.

So there is another party to Phil Lampkin at Loew's Fox tomorrow night!

Gabriel, tune up my harp!

The Eyes and the Smiles Have It!

This grown-up young lady, the smiling beauty above at left, is the former child prodigy of the screen, Mitzi Green, now come along in the general direction of a charming maturity. She will appear in person, beginning tomorrow, as headliner of the stage portion of the bill at the Earle Theater. At right, above, is that genial young singing comic of the celluloids, Jimmy Dunn—or perhaps James to you—who will be distinctly visible, also come tomorrow, in the new 1935 version of the George White "Scandals," major screen item at Loew's Fox.

Retrospective Entertainment Comes to Fore

Favorite Films Return for New Mid-City Approval; Premiere on Stage.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"Ceiling Zero"—one of aviation's most sigificant terms—is the title that falls a little strangely on lay ears as the name of the new play by Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead, which Brock Pemberton is bringing to the National Theater for an engagement of one weak beginning next Monday night.

The story has a background of commercial aviation and is said to embody qualities of drama that are new to the living theater. The principal role will be played by that admirable actor, Osgood Perkins, who will be supported by John B. Litel, Margaret Perry and an excellent cast.

It will be recalled that Brock Pemberton already has one of the foremost comedy hits of the Broadway season to his credit "Personal Appearance." In his present venture he is understood to enjoy the benefits of partnership with the Warner Brothers, who had a silent finger also in "Three Men on a Horse," a smash hit, which, like "Ceiling Zero," was brought to Washington for its first performance on any stage.

There will be the customary Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

• • • •

Loew's Fox Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, will provide three distinct elements of entertainment. On the screen the foremost attraction will be George White's newest edition of his celluloid "Scandals," an A No. 1 musical comedy revue, enlisting the talents of a surprising number of distinguished singers, comedians and dancers, led by George White himself; Ned Sparks, Arline Judge, Eleanor Powell, Alice Faye, Lyda Roberti, James Dunn, Cliff Edwards, Benny Rubin and a feminine ensemble that is well calculated to spill the customers right out in the aisle! Then there will be Phil Lampkin's third anniversary overture, which he dubs, "The Overture of Overtures." As if this were not enough the stage portion of the bill will be headlined by that old master of bringing youth to the fore, Benny Davis, with his newest "Star Dust Revue." Fox Movietone News will complete the bill

• • • •

Tullio Carminati, who scored so decisively as Grace Moore's leading man in "One Night of Love," will be half of the co-stellar partnership on view on the screen of the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. The other half is Lillian Harvey, one of the lovelier of the cinema's importations from abroad. The vehicle for their joint enterprises is "Let's Live Tonight"—the "tonight" idea seeming essential to Signor Carminati's professional endeavors. As its chief stage attraction, the Earle offers that recently incorrigible young mimic and juvenile screen star, Mitzi Green, now grown to beautiful young womanhood and a vaudeville headliner of the first rank. Other acts will include Charlie Melson and Miss Irmanette in "The Brat and the Fiddle;" Grace Doro in "Sophisticated Rhythm," and Hal Sand's "Revels of 1935." Newsreel and orchestra, with Bert Granoff, tenor, and conducted by C. Frederick Clark, will complete the entertainment.

• • • •

Charles Dickens' uncompleted story of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will be the chief feature of the screen bill opening today at the Belasco Theater. In the principal roles are to be seen such prominent players as Claude Rains, Heather Angel, Douglass Montgomery and others of comparable standing. Supplementing the feature will be a specially selected list of auxiliary screen subjects of the first rank. "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" was directed by Stuart Walker, one of the ablest of the theater's practitioners in this field of activity.

• • • •

With one week on F street already to her precocious credit, Shirley Temple, in association with Lionel Barrymore, "Bill" Robinson and numerous others of high achievement before the camera, will resume her downtown triumph in "The Little Colonel," at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow. Evelyn Venable, John Lodge and Sidney Blackmer are among the more important members of the supporting cast. The bill will be supplemented by newsreel and scrupulously chosen short screen subjects.

• • • •

"Life Begins at 40," that hilarious vehicle for the droll talents of the homespun Mr. Will Rogers, will be continued through a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. Richard Cromwell, Rochelle Hudson, Jane Darewell, "Slim" Summerville, Sterling Holloway, George Barbier, Roger Imhoff and Charles Sellon are among the many who add to the luster of this particular screen exhibit. The bill is completed by short sound subjects and newsreel.

• • • •

The film that won more awards for those concerned in its making than probably any other in the history of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will be brought back to the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow for a revival of its podigious hold on public imagination and interest. This would be "It Happened One Night," picturized from Samuel Hopkins Adams' novelette of "Night Bus," with Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable in the co-stellar roles. No more entertaining film than this ever has been made. Bringing it back, supplemented by the usual auxiliaries, seems to be a little in the nature of playing a sure thing.

• • • •

And while all of these revivals, continuation and whatnot are going on, what do you think may be the plan at RKO-Keith's Theater? Quite right, "Roberta," the priceless picturization of the Jerome Kern operetta, originally produced on the stage by Max Gordon, will be carried over for a fourth consecutive week of capacity business. The popularity of this subject is easily and infallibly traceable to the unique skill of Irene Dunn, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the pivotal roles. There are others, too, who help, but these are the mainstays—along with Randolph Scott, Helen Westley, Ferdinand Munier and a few more. Worth seeing and hearing.

The attraction at the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the accustomed Sabbath matinee, will be "Cupid's Carnival," with Jack Montague, Al Hillier and Billy Mifin in charge of the comedy and considerable number of pulchritudinous young women looking after the visual qualities of the pastiming. The extra added feature will be supplied by Nora Ford, here only a few weeks ago, and a torrid number whose early return is amply justified by her unusual hit upon her last appearance—and "appearance" is what it was. Miss Ford is not addicted to concealment!

Holt Exhorts Trade Juniors To Be Liberal

Shake Prejudices of Elders Follow New Deal, He Tells Baltimoreans.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 28.—Senator-elect Rush D. Holt, West Virginia Democrat, today advised 200 members of the Junior Association of Commerce of Baltimore to strip themselves of the conservative prejudices of their senior colleagues and embrace "the opportunities of liberalism and progressivism."

The 29-year-old Senator-elect, in addressing the organization, beseeched the young commercial and professional men to "leave the beaten paths of 1929 business practices and blaze new trails" with the New Deal.

He referred to the Federal court judges who have handed down decisions against the present Administration's program as "mentally dead for 15 years." He said the decisions represented a state of mind—"Hooverism"—that the entire country repudiated in 1932.

The Nation, Holt asserted, was sincerely bent upon a new social philosophy that would evolve "a better balance between the top and the bottom," adding that "as sure as Rush Holt is talking to you, we are going to have old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and a 30-hour week."

Each of these, he felt, was economically sound. While their characteristics sound "terrifying" to the conservative lobbyists in Washington, he said, such an attitude was to be expected.

"Have not conservative interests always opposed radicalism and progressivism?" he asked, using the terms interchangeably.

Holt said that with the older generation unalterably opposed to the New Deal for the most part, it was then the responsibility of the young people to fall in line and defy the criticism that would surely come their way.

"Don't be afraid," he said. "I've been called radical, socialist, communist and a lot of other things I wouldn't mention in public. There was a chance for me in politics and there is a chance for you in your calling."

The Harrisonburg officers are expected to get in shape for the season in practice matches with the Harrisonburg Rifle and Pistol Club in the National Guard Armory.

Louis 2-to-1 Favorite as Brown Makes His Bid for Fame Tonight

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 27.

THE man on the Washington Ball Club whom Clark Griffith absolutely refuses to trade does not even have a regular job on the team . . . he is Ossie Bluege . . . Griffith shudders at the thought of losing Bluege . . . he knows that if, perchance, Cecil Travis proves a flash in the pan, the veteran Bluege still will afford the Nats the best third-base protection in the big leagues . . . He knows, too, that if Lyn Lary or Red Kress fall down at the shortstop job, Ossie Bluege will be the best fielding shortstop in the league . . . and if anything happens to Buddy Myer, Griffith realizes that Bluege would be the perfect stop-gap . . . So, when Walter Johnson, manager of the Indians, mentioned the subject of a trade for Bluege to Griffith the other day the Nats' owner laughed him off . . . despite the fact that Bluege is fated to warm the bench for the Nats.

BLUEGE.

Ed Linke spent $1,400 in his efforts to cure his "dead" pitching arm last winter . . . but the Washington Club refuses to foot any of his doctor bills . . . despite the fact that he is valued at $35,000 as pitchers go . . . The man who finally cured Linke did it for a $250 fee with the proviso that he was not to be paid if the cure was not complete . . . Whenever Mike Martin retires as the Nats' trainer, Lee Jensen, trainer of the Chattanooga club, will step into his post . . . Joe Cronin attempted throughout last winter to sign Jensen as the trainer for the Red Sox, but the big, blond Swede refused all offers . . . He is the author of several books on physical culture.

Nick Altrock embarked on his professional clowning career in 1912 after watching Johnny Kilbane shadow box at Kansas City . . . He tried the same stuff while cutting up on first base the next day and succeeded in knocking himself out . . . it got such a laugh from the fans, he tried it again, faking the knockout, and got another big hand . . . It was the beginning of his career as a pantomimist . . . He says his own best stunt is the one in which he throws two balls at two different players with the same pitch . . . It required a month of daily practice to perfect the trick . . . Once he pitched three balls to three different players on the same throw and got away with it, but has never tried it since . . . he says he wants to keep his 1.000 average.

The Washington Club's ban on golf during the baseball season dates from the day in 1926 when Garland Braxton, the league's leading pitcher at the time, overdid it . . . Braxton played 45 holes in one day with Muddy Ruel and both returned with hands and necks so blistered they were out of the game for a week . . . As an example to his players, Clark Griffith lays off golf throughout the summer . . . He contends there is nothing in common between the golf swing and the batting stroke and that golf works harm to the ball player . . . but Babe Ruth plays golf at every opportunity throughout the baseball season and still manages to hit tolerably well . . . Buddy Myer is a living example of the theory that there is nothing in common in the golf and baseball swings . . . he pulls all his base-hits and slices all his drives.

Four out of five pitchers who spend ten years in professional baseball develop crooked arms . . . Al Thomas' pitching arm is bowed like a barrel stave . . . and Jack Russell can not straighten his right arm at full length . . . Curve-ballers develop the crooked arms more quickly and more completely than fast-ball pitchers . . . The ball players call a wild pitcher a scatter-armed so-and-so . . . Heinie Manush fears for his life against some of the young pitchers in the exhibition games . . . He says the Nats should not play the minor league clubs . . . because of their punk pitching . . . pointing out that every worthwhile pitcher in the country is trying out with the big league teams at this time of year.

Joe Engel, the Nats' lone scout, has been ordered on the road this year . . . He has done no scouting since 1933, having been occupied with the Chattanooga club's business affairs . . . Young Calving Griffith will replace him as general factotum at Chattanooga . . . Engel says nine out of ten young players he had approached in 1933 were already aligned with major league clubs through their farm systems . . . thus, Griffith formed working agreements with the Lancaster and Harrisburg teams, as well as Albany . . . Engel says his biggest flop was his purchase of Earl McNeely for $50,000 . . . despite the fact that McNeely was a tremendous help while the Nats were winning pennants in 1924 and 1925 . . . but Engel marks it a flop because McNeely failed to improve in the big leagues like a $50,000 ball player should improve.

New York Glovers, Underdogs, To Beat Chicago, Gallico Feels

By Paul Gallico

A Special Correspondent.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Here tomorrow evening in the huge Chicago Stadium takes place my favorite sports event, the New York-Chicago intercity Golden Gloves matches, in which 16 private, nonprofessional pugilists and citizens of New York City will engage 16 similar amateur boxing artists from the inskirts and outskirts of Chicago, not to mention Detroit, Cleveland, Green Bay, Davenport, Moline, Milwaukee and other prominent Midwest centers which send athletes to the Chicago Tribune's annual tournament.

We New Yorkers are content to limit our cannoneers to the inhabitants of a circle with a 50-mile radius, with the Metropolis as the center. I suppose we could invite the amateur boxers of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, Boston, New Haven, Washington and other key cities, but then it would no longer be New York.

Win or lose, the New York Golden Gloves boxers have a certain team solidarity when they sing "East Side, West Side, All Around the Town," which has come to be their battle song.

In many respects, this tournament tomorrow night will be the most thrilling of all inter-city matches.

For the aristocrats of Golden Gloves amateur boxing, the team of Chicago champions, stars from three of the great cities of the United States—Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago—are meeting the rank and file of New York—boys, many of whom never even reached the semi-finals of our Golden Gloves, but true, rollicking adventurers, full of confidence and enthusiasm, who volunteered to carry the banner of New York when our championship team decided that they were unwilling and unable to box under the rules and customs that have governed inter-city Golden Golves teams since their inception.

I would not be in Chicago's shoes. They are overwhelming 5-to-1 favorites. They are facing the unknown, because out of our 16 fighters 13 of them have never been seen in action by the Chicago scouts. And our men have everything to win and nothing to lose.

These Chicago fighters will have to be very good, or our team of substitutes is going to laugh them right out of the tournament. Because we don't think we're stars, or supermen, or born to the purple.

Our gang is in the position that comes to very few men. To it is given the chance to knock the silk dicer off the head of a stuck-up without the police being called. I really felt more than a little sorry for this Chicago team. New York will win.

McClelland To Referee Battle

Capital Lad Confident; Is Not 'Scared' by His Rival's Record.

Sellout Is Anticipated, With 15,000 Likely to Watch Fight.

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., March 28.—That the important 10-round heavyweight bout between Joe Louis and Natie Brown here tomorrow night will not end in a draw was definitely established today when it was learned that Elmer (Slim) McClelland, one of the ring's leading referees, will serve as third man in the ring, to render a decision without benefit of judges.

McClelland will be assigned tomorrow by the Michigan State Board of Athletic Control to the task of officiating at the joust. In his long career as an arbiter in the boxfighting business, McClelland has never voted a contest a draw. It is his opinion that no bit of fisticuffing ever ends in a stalmate and, in accordance with that belief, he always awards a contest, no matter how close, to one or the other of the parties concerned.

Uses District System.

Allowed to select his own system of scoring a fight by the rules of the Michigan board, which are rather vague on this point, McClelland employs the "5-point" system in use in the District of Columbia. A native of Detroit, McClelland has worked such important contests as the Carnera-Maloney bout in Miami; the Jackie Fields-Joe Dundee and Jack Thompson-Jackie Fields championship affairs and was the alternate referee for the Schmeling-Stribling bout in Cleveland.

Both Brown and the Brown Bomber from Detroit rested today on the eve of battle. They will weigh in at 2 p. m. tomorrow and each expects to juggle the beam at his best fighting poundage. Brown, who weighed 187 at the conclusion of his final gymnasium workout yesterday, is undergoing the unpleasant process of "drying out" and expects to weigh not more than 188 tomorrow. Louis, who also is undergoing the drying out process, which consists of abstaining from liquids to increase speed and quickness of reactions, probably will weigh not more than 196 at the official recording of tonnages.

Both Are Confident.

In their official pre-battle statements, both the Washington lad and the Black Diamond of Detroit expressed great confidence in their ability to win, which is the customary reaction from fighters in pre-battle statements.

Louis predicted Brown would go no more than two or three rounds at the outside.

"I don't think Brown should give me any trouble," the Detroit Destroyer said. "I'm signed for some even bigger bouts in the near future and can't see any fighter standing in my way at this time. I think I'll stop Brown in not more than two or three rounds."

Brown was just as confident in his prediction, but he did not forecast a knockout.

Rivals Watch Workouts.

"Louis and I have been working in the same gymnasium," Brown stated. "I worked early and Joe followed me as soon as I left the ring. We both have had peeks at each other. How much Louis learned by watching me, I do not know, but I've got a good idea of how to handle him. It is not going to do much good to have him park either his left or right on the point of my chin. I know that.

"Louis has had about every fighter he ever met scared before the fight started. Not me. Meeting him is the golden opportunity that I have been waiting for these many months. To beat him, or even hold him even, boosts me right up into the sacred circle and I'll then be right in line for a shot at Max Baer and his title. This all plain to me. I hope to win impressively and make the fight of my life."

Would Quit Game.

"If this fellow beats me badly," Natie told the writer, "I'm hanging up the mittens for good. This is a crossroads for me. It's just another fight so far as the actual bout is concerned, but it means more than that in another way. It means that after kicking around for so long, I'm going to get a chance

Nats, Allowed 5 Hits, Bow By 5 to 1

Only Run Is Forced Over; Kansas City Coasts to Easy Win.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 28.—The Washington club's batting attack, which has been functioning like a wet match all spring, sputtered again today. Against the pitching of the Kansas City Blues, who finished last in the American Association in 1934, the Nats gathered five hits and a 5-1 beating.

It was their farewell effort before they broke camp in Biloxi for the barnstorming trip North and a sad farewell it was. Going into the eighth inning, the Nats had achieved the staggering total of two hits—both singles—and no runs whatsoever. They hadn't had a man past first base.

They came out of the eighth inning with their lone run of the day as the result of a furious batting rally comprised of two singles, two walks and a wild pitch. Their lone run, incidentally, was forced over the plate by a base on balls.

Phil Page, a confirmed minor leaguer, and Curtis Fullerton, who have had more big league tryouts than the Dionnes have nipples, were the pitchers the Nats were unable to solve. Page left the game at the end of the fourth inning with one hit, a single by Johnny Stone, recorded against him.

Bobby Burke did more than tolerably well on the mound for the Nats, too. In the first four frames of his five-inning turn in the box, Burke yielded nary a hit or a run. But in the fifth he ran into a two-run squall that gave the Blues a 2-0 lead. Burke gave the Blues five of their eight hits.

Succeeding Burke on the mound of little help. The competition disappeared from the ball game in the ninth inning when Russell pitched three straight two-base hits to the lower end of the Blues' batting order after walking a batter with two out.

Breeze Has Good Day.

In the final analysis, it was just a breeze for Kansas City—Johnny Breeze, the catcher. Breeze figured in every one of the Blues' five runs.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 28.—Johnny Broaca and Vito Tamulis held the Cardinals to five hits today and the Yankees defeated the world champions, 9 to 2.

George Selkirk, elected to fill Babe Ruth's shoes on the Yankee roster, drove in five runs with a homer, a double and two singles. Both Norbert Kelelnke and Dazzy Vance, pitching for the Cards, were wild. Each gave four bases on balls and was tapped for four and five hits, respectively.

Joe Mills, Sandlot Ace, Quits Nats; Will Enter Holy Cross

By a Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 28.—Joe Mills, Washington sandlot star who has been a member of the Nats during the spring training trip, today placed a college education ahead of his baseball ambitions and accepted a scholarship to Holy Cross College.

Impressed by Mills' possibilities, Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats was arranging to send the Washington youth to the Lancaster or Harrisburg clubs for season, until Mills informed him of his decision.

Griffith readily agreed that Mills had made a wise choice and complimented him.

"He'll be a better ball player when he gets out of college and he'll still be young enough to get a start in professional baseball," he said. "Jack Barry is up there coaching at Holy Cross, and there isn't a better baseball man in any college in the country. In four years under Barry, he should learn as much baseball as in most any minor league."

As the Washington Club broke camp tonight for the barnstorming trip North, Mills was profuse in his thanks to Griffith, Manager Bucky Harris and The Washington Post, which financed his tryout with the Nats after his selection as the outstanding prospect in The Washington Post Baseball Association, parent body of the Capital's sandlot league.

"It has been a wonderful experience for me down here," Mills said. "I've learned more in a month with the Nats than I could have hoped to pick up on the sandlot in a dozen years. Bucky Harris and Mr. Griffith were swell to me and the next boy The Post sends here for a tryout will be a lucky kid."

During Mills' stay with the Nats he reached the decision to forego his leanings as a third baseman. On th eadvice of Bucky Harris, he was advised to play shortstop or second base. His snap throw to first is more suited for those positions.

Mills received the offer of a scholarship to Holy Cross after his high school career in baseball and football which terminated with his graduation last june. During the summer he also was approached by enthusiastic Columbia University Alumni, but decided in favor of Holy Cross. In college, Mills plans to play only baseball despite his rating as an All-high halfback in Washington.

Giants, Cards Are Seen in Close Race

New Yorkers Are Picked by Neil to Beat Out National Rivals.

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

THE hop skip and jumping through the palmettos, palms and prophecies of the Southern training camps is over, the athletes have had their dress rehearsals, and from the jumble there comes one firm conviction as to this year's National League baseball campaign.

From this seat, it's a two-horse race between the world champion St. Louis Cardinals and the 1933 champions, the New York Giants, and if there is any edge at all, it's with the Manhattan Madhatters, who accomplished the almost unbelievable last fall by kicking away a seven-game lead in little more than three weeks to shove the Cards to World Series glory.

Plenty of Warfare.

There will be plenty of long, bitter guerrilla warfare along the hot way from April to October, with both the Chicago Cubs and the Pirates strengthened; the Boston Braves clinging desperately to the inspiration of the great question mark, George Herman Ruth; the Phillies showing new spirit and balance; the Brooklyn Dodgers always tough, and the Reds experimenting with youth that can't do worse than the last place that has been the "X" marking Cincinnati's spot in the league for years.

Of one thing can the league be certain. With Ruth playing 90 or more games, the attendance figures are sure to chase the financial clouds that have darkened the circuit for years.

Giant Replacements.

Everywhere that the Giants sagged in the debacle of 1934, Bill Terry has made careful replacements. His greatest prize is Dick Bartell, an inspiring shortstop, brought in from Philadelphia with George ("Kiddo") Davis, Giants center fielder in 1933, at the cost of Third Baseman Johnny Vergez and the slogan shortstop, Blondy Ryan.

Mark Koenig, the old Yankee, came from Cincinnati to act as the relief man for what is now a perfectly balanced infield, with Terry, still the class of the circuit, on first, little Hughie Critz at second, Bartell at short, and the veteran Travis (Stonewall) Jackson on third.

Others Envy Outfield.

They won 72 games last year with

His nephew may have a horse entered in the Grand National Steeplechase to be held today at Aintree, England; it may be a grand spectacle, and sportsmen the world over—particularly those holding sweepstakes tickets—may be excited over the outcome, but Senator Jesse H. Metcalfe, of Rhode Island, isn't even mildly interested, he told The Post last night.

The Senator's nephew and namesake has entered Theras, one of the five American-owned horses competing and a decided long shot.

Senator Metcalf laughed when asked if he had purchased a sweepstakes ticket.

"Why, I never saw one in my life," he said.

Eastern Five Glens Falls Winner

Trims Worcester, Mass., Team by 43-33 in Opening Game.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Glens Falls, N. Y., March 28.—Eastern High School, of Washington, D. C., won the right to play in the semifinals of the Eastern States tournament when it defeated the strong Commerce High School, of Worcester, Mass., here tonight in the first game of the initial night's play in the Junior High School gymnasium, 43 to 33.

Schaner, of Eastern, got the jump at center and, after some clever passing in the opening seconds of play, Dean, of Eastern, got the ball and scored fro mthe field for the first basket of the tournament. Both teams played close ball until the last two minutes of the quarter, when a spurt by Eastern resulted in five points, placing the Washington team in the lead, 14 to 8, at the end of the first period.

Although the visitors started off the scoring in the second period, Worcester suddenly hit its stride and started piling up baskets until the score was 18 to 16, with Worcester trailing by 2 points. The remainder of the quarter proved a bad period for Worcester, which was proven by the fact that the Massachusetts team could not score again while the Washington aggregation ran up 6 more points, ending the half with Eastern in the van. MWYPU Eastern in the van, 24 to 16.

Boosts Lead to 33-22.

Edelin and Hollodge, of Washington, continued to loop the ball from all points of the court and, combined with their fast floor work and passing, were largely responsible for Eastern ending up the third quarter 33 to 32. Jaworski, flashy left forward for Worcester, played outstanding throughout the first three periods.

A spurt in the last few minutes of play failed materially to help the Massachusetts team.

Golden Miller Choice in Classic

Previous Winner May Be Shortest Odds in History of Event.

Five American-Owned Horses; Bostwick to Ride 20-1 Shot.

By Gale Talbot,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

AINTREE, England, March 28.—Backed down to 2 to 1 at the track today, Dorothy Paget's wonder horse, Golden Miller, gave promise of starting at the outstanding odds of 3 to 2 tomorrow in the Grand National Steeplechase against 26 of the world's greatest equine jumpers, five of them American owned.

The weight of history as well as the top weight of 175 pounds will be astride last year's winner when the barrier is sprung at about 3 p. m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.) before a crowd of possibly 300,000. The lowest previous price ever quoted against the favorite was 5 to 2 in 1924 against Conjuror II, which fell at the third jump.

Would Make History.

Only five horses in 97 years of history of the steeplechase classic ever won the trying test twice and only two ever won it twice in succession. It has been more than 60 years since the last of these consecutive victories was recorded. Abd El Kader was the first, winning 1850 and 1851, and The Colonel was the last, leading his rivals home in 1869 and 1870. Poethlyn won in 1918-19, but the 1918 race was at Gatwick and is not counted a Grand National by English turfmen.

Nevertheless, thousands of backers of the stout-hearted Golden Miller are confident he will flout history and romp home the winner over the long, heart-breaking course. In the official call-over tonight the big bay gelding was quoted at slightly longer odds of 9 to 4.

Riding with Golden Miller and his rivals will be the hopes of the lucky holders of tickets in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes. On the outcome of the race hinges the distribution of more than $8,000,000 in prize money.

The bright sun of the last several days has put the track in tip-top condition.

"It's exactly the kind of going Golden Miller likes," said his jockey, Gerry Wilson. "I think he will do it again."

If there's anything in omens, how-

Chartres, $62.40, Wins at Tropical Feature in Form Reversal

Snider Rides Veteran to Victory

Jockey Lynch Set Down After Spill Injures Jockey Winters.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 28.—Showers, which had fallen in this vicinity only twice before this winter if memory serves correctly, fell at intermittent intervals here today and drove spectators under the stands. The rare sight of rain evidently worked wonders with J. M. Jones' 5-year-old Chartres. The son of Chance Play recovered his form with remarkable suddenness and led home a smart field in the featured graded handicap class "C," paying $62.40 for a $2 ticket.

With the unfashionable Alvin Snider in the saddle, Chartres reached the judges four open lengths in the van. C. W. Muller's Guapito made up a world of ground to be second, a length and a half clear of G. E. Lewis's Bichloride. The light rains merely served to pack down the track up to this time, for the winner ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 1-5.

Chartres Is Close Up.

Four Spot and Speedmore, one that receded in the betting, set the early pace, while Chartres was right at their heels. The latter flashed to the front with a rush at the far turn and going along easily, won as if pounds the best. Guapito ate up ground after entering the back stretch, but while reaching contention, was not a match for the improved Chartres. Star Bud, always a forward factor, tired in the last furlong and was headed by Bichloride for the show award.

Apprentice Jimmy Lynch, who rode the disqualified Dream Kiss in the third race, was ordered suspended for the remainder of the meeting by the stewards, who recommended to the State Racing Commission that the suspension be continued to April 9.

The crowd did not lack for excitement with the running of the juvenile dash. Sighting Bar, the even-money favorite, scored by a half length over Dream Kiss and the latter was disqualified. This moved Maeriel into the place and Epinel into the show. A jam ensued at the head of the stretch when the winner and Dream Kiss, a field horse, came out from the rail. Morlute, running close up, was bumped and tossed Jockey Mack Winters, the mishap causing interference for Maeriel. The stewards called the first two jockeys into the stand and held Dream Kiss, ridden by Jimmy Lynch, responsible, setting that filly back for foul. Jockey Winters, while not badly injured, sustained a bruised nose and left arm. He cancelled his remaining mounts for the day.

Louis Is Favored To Defeat Brown

to find out just where I'm going in this business.

"Louis' reputation of being the hardest hitter in the ring does not bother me at all. He has only two hands, the same as other fighters. His tremendous hitting power won't do him any good if he can't find his target. I have it on him in ring experience and I'm surely as game as he is, so, with both of us ready, it should be a helluva fight—an' I oughtta win it."

Brown and his manager, Billy McCarney, were in a two-hour huddle this afternoon completing their plan of battle. At the conclusion of the skull practice, neither would say what had been decided, but Brown did intimate he would coast for three or four rounds until he got warmed up, then carry the fight to Louis.

Betting continued brisk, with Louis still ruling a 2-to-1 favorite, but more takers on the short-end popping up every minute. That the Olympia Arena would be sold out became virtually assured today as long lines formed at the various ticket offices throughout the city. At $1, $2 and $3, a sell-out, which would bring into the arena slightly more than 15,000 persons, would draw a gross gate of between $25,000 and $30,000.

Colored Semi-pros to Organize.

All teams wishing to form a colored semi-pro baseball league are asked to be present at a meeting to be held at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock tonight for that purpose.

Golden Miller 2-1 Choice in Classic

Field of 26 Horses May Face Barrier Today in Grand National.

ever, George H. (Pete) Bostwick, young American sportsman, provided a good one today when he rode his own horse, Canandaigua, to victory in the Lancashire Hurdle Race, opening event of Aintree's three-day meeting. His Castle Irwell, which he will ride tomorrow, is being well backed at 20 to 1.

Miss Paget, a cousin of John Hay Whitney and C. V. Whitney, also furnished one of today's winners when her 4-year-old Gay Dancer won the Liverpool Spring Cup.

John Hay Whitney's Thomond II, third in the 1934 running and the most highly fancied of the American quintet, remained the firm second choice at 6 to 1 with F. E. Peek's French-bred Tapinois, quoted at 10 to 2, and Castle Irwell, the fourth choice.

Of the three other American-owned representatives in the race, only Whitney's Royal Ransom was well considered. He was quoted at 25 to 1, while Jesse Metcalfe's Theras was held at 66 to 1 and M. D. Blair's Fouquet at 80 to 1.

Reynoldstown Backed.

Maj. Noel Furlong's Reynoldstown, previously the fourth choice, moved down to 25 to 1, while the odds on Southern Hero and Really True were shortened to 22 to 1. The other odds were, Brienz and Alexena, 25 to 1; Bachelor Prince, 40 to 1; Slater, 43 to 1; Blue Prince and Uncle Batt, 45 to 1; Princess Mir, Ballybrack, Trocadero, 50 to 1; Theras, Huic Holloa and Lazy Boots, 66 to 1; Emancipator, 80 to 1, and Red Park, Brave Cry, Jimmy James and Master Orange, 100 to 1.

The fact that a comparatively small field—the samallest since 24 faced the barrier in 1920—will start tomorrow is considered an important item in Golden Miller's effort to score a double. There'll be much less jamming than in 1929, for instance, when 66 horses started and practically had to wait their turn at the jumps.

Liverpool was in the throes of its customary Grand National hysteria. Every person in sight had binoculars over his shoulder and there was only one topic of conversation. The usual house parties of the Duke of Westminster and other English aristocrats were going full blast around the Aintree course.

Sixty special trains and scores of airplanes are expected to swell the crowd tomorrow. One party of 40 from the United States has chartered a huge airliner to fly them from their liner arriving at Cherbourg to the race track in time for the race.

Two Horses Dead; Believed Poisoned

Autopsy at Hagerstown Supports Charge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 28.—Helen's Alibi and Merry Miss, two runners wintering at the Hagerstown Fair Grounds, died this week from what their owner, George Born, believes was poison.

Both horses were being conditioned for the Bowie meet, after having completed a successful season at Charles Town, where Helen's Alibi won two races in four starts last December, and Merry Miss won one and finished second in two starts.

A third horse, Wandering Jim, owned by Born, is ill. An autopsy performed today upon Helen's Alibi showed evidence of poison, said Born. The three horses were affected similarly, their throats apparently becoming paralyzed, and they were unable to swallow food.

Runyan Holds Pinehurst Golf Lead

Adds 71 to Total 136; Houghton's 75 Keeps Him in Running.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 28.—Paul Runyan held his three-stroke advantage over the North and South open tournament field through the halfway mark today by firing a 71 for a 36-hole total of 136.

Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., and Ray Mangrum, of Los Angeles, who came through with 68's to tie for second on the opening day, when Runyan got away to a flying start with a 65, lost a stroke to the little P. G. A. champion with 72's and yielded second place to Byron Nelson, of Texarkana, Tex.

Young Nelson, a sensation on his tour of the winter circuit brought in a 69 to go with his initial round 70 for 139.

Nelson was one of three players breaking 70 for the second round. The others were Mike Turnesa, of the Elmsford (N. Y.) Turnesas, who also had a 69, and Ted Turner, of Pine Valley, N. J., whose 68 was the lowest round of the day.

Turnesa's 69 tied him at 140 with Serafin and Mangrum. The next best score was 142. Bunched at this figure were Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond; Deny Shute, Philadelphia, and Harry Cooper, Chicago. Turner, who started with a 75, stood alone at 143.

Eight strokes back of Runyan at 144 was Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., the defending titleholder, along with Tom Kerrigan, Mount Vernon, N. Y.; Harold McSpaden, Kansas City; Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Joe Ezar, Waco, Tex., and Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N. J.

Back in the ruck were a host of golf's big names. Walter Hagen's total with a 79 today was 154. Tommy Armour had 149, Horton Smith, 150; Frank Walsh, 151, and Wiffy Cox, 151.

"The Haig's" card showed a big 9 on the eighth hole, where he tried four times before getting his ball out of a bunker with a brassie.

Al Houghton, Washington, D. C., professional, remained among the leaders by virtue of adding a 75 to his 73 of yesterday. Houghton played well from tee to green, but a streak of 3 putt greens proved costly.

Roanoke College To Play in League

Rules of New Conference May Allow Entrance.

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Va., March 28.—Although still eyeing the formation of the South Atlantic Intecollegiate Conference with more than passing interest, Roanoke College has no intention of deserting the Virginia Conference, Athletic Director Gordon C. White said today.

Whether Roanoke College will join the new loop when final organization is completed at a meeting at Charlotte May 1 is a question that will depend in large measure, he said, on the new loop's eligibility rules and freshman regulations.

"At present," he said, "we are simply observing with interest, and we do not wish to commit ourselves. However, regardless of what action may be taken and even though this conference does work out its eligibility rules to conform to strict Southern Conference rules under which we now play, we will not consider withdrawing from the Virginia Conference, as it is our intention to remain in this conference as long as it exsts."

Girl, 8, to Vie in Open Swim Here Next Week

AMELIA BLASER.

TINIEST competitive swimmer in the District—and mayhap in the East—is wee Amelia Blaser, 8 years old and all of 44 inches high. But size does not make the woman, Amelia might have been heard to say, busily going through a very conscientious workout yesterday in preparation for the open swim meet to be held next week at the Y. W. C. A.

"And besides, see how very much taller I am than this yardstick," she says, sizing up to that object so that she towered over it by nearly a head.

Like a naughty little elfin, Amelia then caused several onlooking mothers and aunts of other children to gasp with alarm as she rocketed off the diving board in a dangerous-looking back flip only to snap out of it cleanly and knife the water like many a young lady twice her age would like to do.

Amelia then did two fast lengths of the pool with a powerful crawl stroke and followed this performance by sprinting two more with a steady, even back stroke as easily as she would walk underneath your kitchen table.

In her last meet, two weeks ago in the Y. W. C. A. pool, Amelia took the individual honors by a wide margin, winning the 40-yard free style, 40-yard back stroke and the diving for children under 10. Weighing but 43 pounds, she was the smallest child in the meet by more than 20 pounds.

Mrs. Florence Skadding Morris, instructor at the Y. W., is Amelia's swimming teacher. Despite her dazzling preclivities as a water speed sprite, Amelia has been swimming only two months.

Giants and Cards Standout In National Race, Neil Says

Parmelee out two months with appendicitis. Hubbell has never looked better. They have relief strength to keep them rested all the way.

The remainder of the league has made desperate efforts to keep pace with these improvements and the Cards have succeeded except for a pitching staff that, aside from J. Herman (Dizzy) Dean, their superstar, and Paul (Daffy) Dean, the quiet one, who some day may be even greater than his big brother, is extremely scratchy.

Bill Hallahan and Bill Walker, the veteran southpaws, are problem children, and at their advanced ages Jess Haines and Dazzy Vance likewise are gambles. Terry Moore, sensational youngster from Columbus, has fitted neatly into center, formerly a weak spot between Joe Medwick and Jack Rothrock or Rob Worthington.

There is no questioning the strength of an infield that has the murderous Jim Collins on first, Frankie Frisch on second, Leo Durocher or the astonishing Charley Gelbert for shortstops and Pepper Martin on third—or the catching of Bill Delancey and Virgil Davis.

But Deans or no Deans, even though between them the brothers win another 49 games, pitching is still the Cardinal problem over a 154-game stretch.

Cubs, Pirates Stronger.

The same applies to the Cubs and Pirates, though both, through free trading, are stronger than last season. The Cubs gave up two starting pitchers, the Veteran Guy Bush and Big Jim Weaver, along with Babe Herman, to get the left-hander they wanted. Larry French, and Freddy Lindstrom from the Pirates.

This gives the Cubs a pitching big four of Lon Warneke, French, Carleton and Bill Lee, but Charley Root must stage a comeback and either Lefty Roy Henshaw or some youngster must come through to give the team the pitching balance it needs for the long grind. Otherwise, the club is the same except that Lindstrom will play third in the infield with Bill Herman. Bill Jurges and Charley Grimm; Young Ken O'Dea will help Gabby Hartnett with the catching, while Chuck Klein's return to health adds to his outfield strength with Kiki Cuyler and Tut Stainback.

Slab Staff Improved.

Addition of Bush and Weaver, to help the veteran Waite Hoyt and Lefty Ralph Birkhofer, has improved the Pirates' pitching considerably, but Red Lucas must be better than in 1934, and more help will be needed from Hal Smith and Bill Swift. Babe Herman joins the Waner boys, Paul and Lloyd, in the outfield, and the infield of Gus Suhr, Harry Lavagetto, Floyd Vaughn and Manager Pie Traynor is unchanged.

Aside from Ruth, the Braves are about the same, except that Rabbit Maranville's gallant comeback attempt apparently has failed, putting Les Mallon at second in the infield with Bill Urbanski, Pinkey Whitney and Buck Jordan, who is having holdout trouble. The Bhaves have three crack-starting pitchers in Frankhouse, Betts and Brandt, and if Ben Cantwell, a 20-game winner in 1933, is right again, and Bob Brown's arm has healed, their pitching staff is strong.

The Phillies are the league dark horses, with a fair pitching staff headed by brilliant Curt Davis, an infield greatly improved by the addition and Ryan and Vergez, a sturdy outfield in Moore, Allen and Watkins, and good catching from Jimmie Wilson and Al Todd.

Everyone fears Casey Stengel's Dodgers, particularly after what they did to the Giants last fall, and no one knows what to expect of the Cincinnati Reds, made up chiefly of Sammy Byrd and Dan McFayden, from the Yankees; Jim Bottomley, Chick Hafey, and assorted combings from the rest of the National League, plus a host of AA youngsters. Stengel has a veteran infield in Leslie, Cuccinello, Frey and Stripp, the best catcher in the league in Al Lopez, two fine outfielders in Len Koenecke and Buzz Boyle.

With Van Mungo, speed-ball ace; Emil Leonard, Johnny Babich, Ray Benge and probably Watson Clark for starting pitchers, the Dodgers can be as tough as they want to. The rest of the league hopes no one speaks disparagingly of them, or treats them with anything but indulgent kindness.

Would Buy Bean.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 28 (AP).—Manager Allan Sothoron of the Milwaukee Brewers today telegraphed Billy Evans, of the Cleveland Indians, asking him to put a price on Belve Bean, right handed pitcher, who turned in 17 victories out of his last 20 starts for Toledo in 1932.

LaRowe Calls Spring Drill Of Boxers

Virginia's Champs to Open Practice on Monday; Coach Quits Bed.

By the Associated Press.

UNIVERSITY, Va., March 28.—Back in harness again after lying abed for weeks, Johnny LaRowe, 67-year-old boxing coach, will put his lads through a few weeks of spring practice in preparation for the 1936 season.

While Coach LaRowe was confined to bed his charges, directed by Al York, assistant coach, went through their twenty-fourth dual meet without defeat and then won the Southern Conference boxing championship for the fifth consecutive season.

"No coach could ask for more than my boys gave me," said the veteran Cavalier ring tutor. "But it wasn't much fun for the old man to lie flat on his back and wonder how they were looking."

To Report Monday.

Monday the men who'll box for Virginia next spring have been asked to report for practice. LaRowe plans to work them for three or four weeks.

"We won't undertake any hard work," he said, "but we'll just take up some technical points. In a few practices we can correct some mistakes that have been made during the last season. It is easy to correct a bad habit just as it has started. What they did during the winter is still fresh in the boys' minds, and a few practices now will give us a good start for next year.

"I didn't see any of the regular boxers after January, when I had to go to bed. And the new men had had only one match. I won't be able to do much coaching, just sit and watch."

Two Men are Lost.

Coach LaRowe can count on his entire varsity line-up of 1935 with the exception of the two lightest weights. Maynard Womer, of Johnstown, Pa., Southern Conference welterweight champion, has been elected captain.

James G. Driver, athletic director, is not yet ready to announce the Cavalier ring schedule for 1935, but probably will start the season against Harvard at home for the third year in succession. Both North Carolina and V. M. I. probably will be met here.

Stock Market Steady Despite Jolts in News

Utilities Hold Firm but Rail Securities Tend Downward.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Securities markets sailed rough seas with a fairly even keel today.

Wall Street received the bourse moratorium in Belgium philosophically in the morning, but received a mild jolt during the afternoon with the announcement of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad that it was planning a reorganization.

Rail securities headed downward and second-grade carrier bonds were rather weak for a time, but utilities were bolstered by news that the New York State Senate had by an overwhelming majority defeated a proposal to permit New York City to build a municipal plant without submitting the plan to a referendum.

The Associated Press average of 15 rail stocks dipped .4, but the average of 15 utilities rose .2, and the 30 industrials lost only .1, so the composite of 60 shares showed a sag for the day of only .1, at 36.2. Trading quickened a little, but the turnover was only 613,040 shares.

Rail shares for the most part held their losses to moderate proportions. Gains in utilities were largely limited to fractions. Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, North American and a few others rose about ½ point. Coca Cola had another runup and closed nearly 4 higher at 198¾. Motors and steels were firm for a time, but slid back to around previously closing levels.

Break in Rye Weakens Grain

Cotton Rallies From Decline but Closes 11 to 21 Points Off.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 28.—Jolted by a break in the rye market and by indications of disturbed European monetary conditions, all grain values developed weakness today.

Rye suffered from selling that appeared to be largely in the nature of liquidation for holders made anxious over persistent imports of that grain into the United States.

Rye closed unstable at the day's bottom figures, 1⅜ to 1¾ under yesterday's finish; May, 54⅜; wheat, ⅝ to ⅞ off; May, 94⅝@94¾; corn, ⅝ to ¾ down; May, 78¾@78⅞; oats, at ⅛ to ½ decline, and provisions varying from 15 cents setback to a rise of 7 cents.

Corn and oats took their cue from wheat and rye. Provisions averaged lower, responsive to action of hog values.

Cotton Market.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Rallies from a sharp opening decline in cotton today were not fully maintained and the market closed steady at net declines of 11 to 21 points. There was considerable foreign selling and liquidation at the start, in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and nervousness over political and monetary conditions in Europe.

After the early break of 20 to 24 points there were rallies of 15 to 20 points led by old crop positions, but prices eased again under renewed liquidation and scattered selling.

Revival of Capital Issues Becomes a Fact; Underwriters Are Now Seeking High-Quality Securities for Investors.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 28.—With new bond offerings outside of Federal Government financing approaching the $150,000,000 mark this week, the revival of capital-issue activity so often predicted in recent months is at last a fact. Furthermore, the reception accorded the offerings made this week was so satisfactory that underwriters are searching intensively for additional bond issues of a quality high enough to satisfy the institutional investors that remain the backbone of the capital market at this time.

Usually, when a flood of new bond issues appears, there is danger of congestion in the market, with a consequent turn downward in bond prices. The danger is not present on this occasion, however, because nearly all the new issues are exclusively for refunding purposes. Hence, they constitute no net addition to the supply of investment securities available in the market. On the other hand, the huge surplus of liquid funds available for investment in the hands of commercial banks, life insurance companies and many other financial institutions continues to grow. Hence, underwriting houses feel that a receptive market for new offerings of good quality will continue at least for some months to come.

As has often been the case, the actual appearance of a number of new bond offerings is causing a number of corporations which have been hesitating about new issues to decide to proceed forthwith. The list of prospective offerings is lengthening rapidly, therefore. Each of the largest New York underwriting houses reports five or six issues almost ready for offering, and a number of others at various stages of negotiation. The disappearance of bank security affiliates, and the fact that prviate bankers may not now engage in the security business, have reduced sharply the number of houses that engage in security underwritings, however.

Process of Perfecting Issues Slowed Down.

This slows up the process of perfecting issues for offering, especially in view of the red tape imposed by the new security legislation. Many corporations are finding it necessary to make new banking connections, although the tendency has been for offerings to follow officers or partners of former underwriting houses who have joined organizations that are still in the business.

This week has witnessed by far the largest volume of new offerings of any comparable period since the Federal securities act was passed almost two years ago. Estimates of the volume of new financing pending or under active negotiation have jumped to approximately $500,000,000. Underwriting houses say it is quite within the realm of probability that a billion of new financing, other than for the Federal Government, will be consummated during the next six months.

The bulk of these issues will be refunding in character. However, in a number of cases only part of the proceeds will be used to pay off old debts, while additional bonds will be sold for new money. The Bethlehem Steel issue now under negotiation is one of this combined refunding and new capital character. A few of the prospective issues, like $15,000,000 4½ per cent ten-year notes for the National Distillers Products Corporation, are mainly for new capital purposes. The major issues now being planned, however, such as $68,000,000 for the Southern California Edison and $90,000,000 for Armour & Co., are designed entirely to replace existing bonds with higher coupon rates, thus reducing the interest charges of these companies.

Foreign Financing Revival Expected.

A selective revival of foreign financing is also contemplated at a somewhat later stage, chiefly for refunding purposes. The most important issues of this character likely to come out if market conditions continue to improve will be those of Australia, Argentina and some of the Scandinavian countries. The Canadian Pacific Railway has discussed a $60,000,000 issue with New York bankers.

Underwriting houses have decided to follow the policy of using large selling groups and paying selling commissions to dealers who join these groups of 1 to 2 per cent, even where they could place an issue with a few institutions if they were so minded. The reason for this is the desire to rebuild Nation-wide syndicates able to distribute securities to all types of investors. Right now a sellers' market exists, and good bonds are easy to place.

King Cotton's Throne Tottering, National Credit Men Are Told

U. S. Policy of Pegging Price at 12 Cents a Pound, Because of Government Loans at That Figure, Regarded as Base of Trouble.

Atlanta, Ga., March 28.—King Cotton, as far as the United States is concerned, is in the position of most monarchs today—down and almost out, Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, tonight told the meeting of the Atlanta Association of Credit Men.

"King Cotton's throne is tottering. The cause of his Majesty's 'jitters' is the fundamental error which has been made by those who want to help the American cotton grower. Playing both ends against the middle is harming rather than helping the cause.

"If the United States wants to pay a bounty to farmers through crop restriction programs, processing taxes and price-fixing, it must expect that at the same time that domestic conditions, as far as price levels are concerned, show improvement, the export market for such an item of world trade as cotton will be curtailed, if not altogether lost.

Figures for Six Months.

"These figures prove that conclusively: In the six months ending January 31, 1935, London reports indicate a drop of 19 per cent in consumption of American cotton during that period, while the consumption of other countries, growths increased appreciably. For that period of time the world consumption totaled 12,000,000 bales, as compared with 11,700,000 bales for the same period a year before. But the American cotton consumed was only 5,450,000 bales of that 12,000,000-bale total.

"That indicates a big drop. In a period when half a million more bales of cotton were used throughout the world, the consumption of American cotton fell by a million bales, approximately. The trouble with cotton, of course, is a matter of years, not of a year or two. When the Federal Farm Board, under the Hoover Administration, pegged the price of cotton in 1929-30, it piled up such a surplus that the price of cotton was forced down to 6 cents a pound.

"The Roosevelt Administration was faced with this cotton problem and evolved the agricultural adjustment act, which in the course of two years had fixed the price of American cotton at around 12 cents. This price-fixing has cut considerably the use of American cotton abroad, where, in the competitive market, the price was well below the price fixed by our Government in this country.

Drop of 3,000,000 Bales.

"In the year 1932 we sold abroad almost 9,000,000 bales of cotton. In 1934 we sold less than 6,000,000. There are not many cotton-growing lands which can produce as fine a quality of cotton as American cotton, but the price of American cotton makes substitute seem desirable, even though they are somewhat inferior in quality.

"Our policy of pegging the price at 12 cents a pound, occasioned by the Government's loans to domestic producers at that price, is the base of the trouble.

"Foreign buyers turn elsewhere. These producing countries then increase their acreage. The quality of American cotton will allow it to fight its way back into the leading position in the world's cotton trade, if the economic nationalism of our country and all other countries is curtailed and international trade is once again allowed to flow free of unreasonable restriction and obstruction."

Argentina Plans Cotton Expansion For Export Trade

Buenos Aires, March 28.—Argentina is organizing a campaign to increase the production of cotton as a result of steadily expanding exports and a general increase in the area planted. The Banco de la Nacion has announced new loan facilities under which they will lend up to 50,000 pesos (about $17,000 at the official rate of exchange) to producers, dealers and ginners of cotton in proportion to their individual operations. The bank will lend 70 per cent of the market value on terminal market stocks giving liberal facilities to producers.

Export prospects are so promising that a resolute effort is being made to increase expansion of Argentina's cotton area. Exports to date amount to 4,738 bales, as compared with 1,143 bales at this time last year.

Bond Market Is Firm Except Rail Issues

Corporates Are Higher; Great Northern 4½s Off 4 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Weakness in secondary railroad issues failed to dislodge other sections of the corporate bond market today and leading utilities and industrials worked moderately higher. United States Governments displayed signs of fatigue.

Announcement of the St. Paul reorganization plan late in the market session caused only a ripple in other sections, although carrier obligations of the speculative type staggered badly, as indicated by the Associated Press rail averages, which yielded .7 of a point to another new 1935 low at 76.8.

Heaviest losers were Great Northern 4½s, off 4 points at 65; Nickel Plate 5½s, off 1¼ at 58; Northern Pacific 6s, of 2½ at 89½, and Santa Fe 4s, off 1⅝ at 108. Bonds of the St. Paul, already depressed to the near-vanishing point, sold minor fractions to more than a point lower.

Improvement in the utilities coincided with a better tone in this group of stocks. Best showing in the industrial section was made by Chile Copper 5s at 86, Loew's 6s at 105 and United States Rubber 5s at 92.

United States Governments were less active and in all save a few issues closing prices were from two-thirty-seconds to around six-thirty-seconds lower. The foreign section was upset by action of the Belgian government in taking such measures as are believed to make devaluation of her currency a certainty. Transfers aggregated $11,273,000, par value, against $10,456,000 on Wednesday.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co Offer $16,000,000Bond Issue

Other members of the syndicate are Lee Higginson Corporation, Brown, Harriman & Co., Edward B. Smith & Co., Field Glore & Co. and the First Boston Corporation.

Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury on March 28 was: Receipts, $58,846,041.49; expenditures, $58,051,999.27; balance, $2,267,712,261.08; customs receipts for the month, $27,279,432.19.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $2,853,164,943.63; expenditures, $5,014,912,559.17 (including $2,579,461,016.16 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $2,161,747,813.54; gold assets, $8,560,564,409.55.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Week-end settlement coupled with the Belgian crisis restricted business and caused uncertainty whereunder prices sagged on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities led the decline among the British stocks, while German and Belgian bonds were the weakest of the foreign issues. Paris sold gold mining shares, but supported oil and copper stocks. Argentine rails held steady. The market closed dull.

Paris—Business diminished on the bourse today. Rentes declined, while international issues were strong. Armament stocks continued their upward tendency. The closing was inactively irregular.

Berlin—After opening weak, trading on the boerse became extremely inactive. The closing was dull.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

FOLLOWING reports that the tennis courts at the Monument and in Henry Park will be abolished in the so-called "beautification" of the Mall area, letters of protest from Government employes have been piling up on our desk.

BAKER.

All urge not only maintenance of the present courts, but construction of more in the same localities. Many of the letters are from persons who do not play tennis, but recognize the healthful pleasure and civic assets in the game.

Demands on the courts this year will be greater than ever when the staggered hours system becomes general for more than 100,000 Federal workers in Washington. Another factor that will tax the capacity of the already too few courts is the army of new employes that has moved into the Capital during the past year.

Removing the courts to the suburban sections will not solve the problem, employes in the downtown area emphasize, as most of them go direct from their desks to play. If an employe, say in the Commerce Building, gets off work at 4:30 (peak of the rush hour) he would have to lose almost an hour of daylight in going to courts in Rock Creek Park or over to Anacostia.

How the employes feel is revealed in the following excerpts from a few of the letters:

"As a diehard tennis player, I want to cast my vote in favor of more courts in the District. Time and again I have had to waste two and three hours waiting to get on. And surely tennis courts are not eye-sores, but rather tend to beautify any landscape."—J. S. D. (F), Agriculture

"Like thousands of other Government employes, my work demands that we confine our tennis playing to Saturday afternoons and Sundays. At these times facilities are grossly inadequate. Can't you please suggest to the powers that be to install a few more courts?"—Helen and Suzanne (P), Treasury.

"If the Monument tennis courts are removed it will be no less than a crying shame Now, I'm not a player myself, but I think there is no more pleasing sight to us old-timers than to watch the younger generation indulge in this clean, wholesome pastime. Since the Monument courts are really the main group, their removal would be obviously deeply regretted."—Mrs. Mary H. Patton (F), RFC.

"In the 15 years I have worked in Washington there have never been sufficient tennis courts, and with the game growing every year in popularity, a deletion rather than addition to tennis playing facilities would make the Chamber of Commerce place tongue in cheek, so to speak, when it tried to paint the Nation's Capital as a desirable residential city."—T. S. B. (C), Census Bureau.

". . . Be assured of my support in any campaign to obtain more tennis courts near the Triangle area . . ." Paul H. Oesher (F), National Museum.

". . . Twenty clay tennis courts could be built and maintained with the money involved in the construction and operation of an ordinary fountain on which, incidentally, are plastered 'No Wading' signs . . ." Thomas G. McGraw (P), HOLC.

Edward A. Preble, Bureau of Biological Survey, writes on "Audubon, the American Woodsman," in the April issue of Nature Magazine. His article is a biographical sketch of the great artist-naturalist, John James Audubon, whose one hundred and fiftieth anniversary will be celebrated April 26. It is illustrated with drawings by Garner Jex, local artist.

Thirty Days—Oh, Gosh!

Gosh, I'd like to help the wife with the house cleaning,
I'd like to go a-fishing on the bay,
I'd like to plant just lots and lots of roses,
And take the kids out picnicking one day!

But I've figured up the time that I've got coming—
That 15 days goes but a little ways—
And I've got to save a few days for vacation.
Gosh, I wish they'd give us back our 30 days!

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Murder trials before the council of the Areopagus, ancient Greek body which combined judicial, legislative and executive duties, were held in the open air so that the judges would not have to sit in the same room with a murderer. Court procedure was as strange as the setting.

Accusations in homicide cases were brought before the body by relatives of the victim, after which officials made three investigations, each investigation being made in a different month. The case was then brought up for hearing in the open air. Each party was allowed to make two speeches, but it was provided that when the accuser finished his first speech the accused could stop the trial and withdraw into exile unless he was accused of killing his father.

Trials lasted three days, and a majority vote of the council was the verdict. In case of a tie vote the defendant was freed, but if he was convicted he suffered capital punishment and confiscation of his property.

Strange as it seems, the Giant Strombus is not a true pearl oyster, yet it produces pearls valuable because of their distinctive pink color. Pearls of this mussel, however, sometimes fade and lose their color.

Amelia Earhart Ends Coast Hop

Will Prepare for Speed Flight to Mexico City.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 28.—Amelia Earhart landed here today from the East to give a lecture Saturday on aviation and prepare for a speed flight to Mexico City.

She had no immediate comment on the assault on her women's transcontinental flight record of 17 hours 7½ minutes planned by Laura Ingalls.

Work on the landing gear of Miss Ingalls' black monoplane continued. Her projected non-stop hop to New York may be delayed until Sunday or later, if the weather is unfavorable.

Ground tests and adjustments on the engine of Wiley Post's globe-circling plane, the Winnie Mae, will be continued tomorrow in preparation for a projected third attempt when conditions permit to fly through the stratosphere to New York.

Napoleon and Uncle Elby

By Clifford McBride

There may be a VINCENT LOPEZ... or RUTH SZYLENSKI in your home

In these days of economic stress and insecurity when all around us we see glaring examples of the "survival of the fittest" in all walks of life . . . how dramatically is brought home to parents the necessity of giving their children the necessary equipment to combat periods of depression and insecurity. There is no safer armament than Education—yes, Musical Education.

Genius in the musical world develops in the most out-of-the-way places. Perhaps in your own home your son, Johnny, or your daughter, Mary, under the proper guidance and tutelage might develop into a Musical Maestro such as Vincent Lopez, who entertains millions with his Piano Technique over the ether waves and by personal appearances, and whose weekly income reaches four figures . . . or perhaps your daughter if given the proper encouragement may develop into a youthful prodigy such as 9-year-old Ruth Szylenski, who has astonished music critics of the world by the ease and grace with which she has conquered the difficult Piano Classics of the Masters.

The Homer L. Kitt Company, Washington's Premier Musical House, offers to parents of Greater Washington an opportunity to allow you to develop the musical talents of your children not only at piano playing but with all other types of musical instruments.

Our startling offer for a limited time only consists of a new piano with bench to match delivered into your home for $2.25 per week with 52 private lessons. Other musical instruments together with lessons at $1.50.

Our musical instruments are made of the finest materials by the skilled hands of master craftsmen.

Investigate this unusual offer now. Decide today to do your part to start your children on the path to fame and fortune. See Mr. Cannon and he will explain the plan in full.

Walt Mason, Himself

Our Afflictions.

We sometimes ask in our distress why life is made so sore a mess; why must we suffer dark green pain, when suffering is all in vain; it has no high or worthy trend, it doesn't lead to some good end. It all is useless, we insist, we also ween and wot and wist. We set forth in the morning light, and all the world's serene and bright; we mix with other Jills and Jacks, and talk about the income tax, we speak in light and breezy terms—and all these folks distribute germs, and when at night our tents we pitch, we are afflicted with the itch, we have the mumps, the flu, the croup, and fell diseases in a group, such raw diseases as the hives lay desolate our valued lives, the pangs of jumping rheumatiz through all our bones and tendons whiz. Our kindly neighbors to us roll, to counsel, comfort and condole, to tell us of the coming dawn, and we just pass the microbes on, and these kind neighbors in their turn have grievous maladies to burn. And so we ask, while chewing pills, what is the sense of all these ills. Perhaps if we were never sick, were always hale and sound and quick, to everlasting health restored, we might all be profoundly bored. The men who live in climates mild, where weather's never rough nor wild, where springtime lasts throughout the year and raging tempests don't appear, admit at times they'd like to see a howling blizzard sweep the lea.

Scout Course For Jamboree Guides Begun

Plans Are Completed for Extensive Improvements at Camp Roosevelt.

The training course for Scout jamboree guides began last Saturday at the Training Center, 1018 Vermont avenue, with Harvey Gordon, camping engineer of the national council, giving the prospective guides a picture of the physical set-up for the jamboree, and an outline of the course to be followed. The sessions will continue each Saturday evening for five weeks, and will include presentations by prominent Washingtonians. This preliminary course is designed for those who are going into the field to help in the set-up and instruction of similar training courses.

The transportation session of the course, which will deal with all methods of transportation here, will have as an outline a new transportation map of Washington, which will show the system, including the rerouting changes.

Courses Completed.

Training courses have been completed during this week in Washington and also in Fairfax, Va. Another course in the elements of scoutmastership is scheduled to begin April 9 at Alexandria, Va. This training is being conducted under the direction of the training committee of the District of Columbia Council, of which Dr. William T. McClosky is acting chairman.

At a recent meeting of the camping committee plans were completed for extensive improvements at Camp Roosevelt. Hubert L. Maze, the recently appointed assistant executive of the local council, will be the director of Camp Roosevelt this year. He has looked over the camp and is enthusiastic over its beauty and possibilities for camping.

Loftis to Direct Camp.

District Commissioner J. Wesley Loftis, the committee announced, again will be camp director at the Woodrow Wilson Scout Reservation at Burnt Mills, Md.

Scouting in America mourn the loss of Vice President Bolton Smith, who died Wednesday. Funeral services were held Thursday at the Washington Cathedral and representatives of the national and local councils were present.

New troops have recently been organized at Rockville, Md., under the chamber of commerce, and at the Somerset School, under the P.-T. A. A new Cub Pack will apply for a charter this week under the P.-T. A. of the Powell Elementary School.

Newspaperman Loses $34 to 3 Kidnapers

Walter D. Addison, a Roanoke, Va., newspaperman, told police early yesterday that he was held up by three gunmen, kidnaped and robbed of $34.41.

Addison, visiting at the home of Ralph Finch, 2123 LeRoy place northwest, said he left a downtown hotel and was en route home when three men in an automobile hailed him. After a few brief words, he reported, the strangers grabbed him and hauled him into the car.

An hour later, Addison declared, he was dumped into the stret near Bunker Hill road and Eastern avenue northeast. He told Twelfth Precinct police that the bandits took two fountain pens in addition to money.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Seven Washington amateurs will troup to the mike Saturday at 6:45 p. m. in the salon of nations of the Washington Hotel. These hopefuls make up the first installment of Art Godfrey's show on WJSV.

Here are the names:

Margaret E. Hilt, 22, 4319 Third street northwest, singer. Selection, "Blue Moon."

Virginia F. Holden, 30, 1300 Monroe street northwest, singer. Selection, "The Old Refrain."

William M. Bottaile, 22, 3145 Mount Pleasant street northwest, with Jack C. Gouldman and Celina Marshall will appear as trio. Selection, "The Last Round-up."

Irvin Hackerman, 20, 731 Quebec place northwest, singer. Selection, "Because of Once Upon a Time."

Robert W. McLendon, 22, 2443 Eighteenth street northwest, singer. Selection, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

Frances Geneva Burger, 19, 1827 W street southeast, singer. Selection, "Be Still, My Heart."

Dennis Elwood Gartner, 50, Alexandria, Va., imitator. Will imitate trains, cornet, airplanes.

Many applicants had to be sent home because they didn't know what song they wanted to sing. So please when you arrive at WJSV for your audition bear in mind that the orchestra has to be informed in order to make arrangements.

Judges will be radio editors Dick Tenally, of the News; James Chinn, of the Evening Star, and this editor.

Sports news fills a big place in today's broadcasts. The Grand National Steeplechase in Aintree, England, is carried over both networks, coming on WJSV and WMAL at 9:45 a. m. This is the ninety-seventh anniversary of the Grand National running, an event which attracts the best horses in America and Europe, as well as capacity audiences on the spot.

At 11:30 p. m. on WRC, you'll hear blow by blow descriptions of the annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament from the Chicago Auditorium.

Mrs. Roosevelt tells you about "Keeping a Budget in the White House," proving that even the First Lady may have housekeeping difficulties, WJSV, 8 p. m.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, whose public appearances are probably more numerous than those of any other star, makes her debut as a dramatic actress on "First Nighter" program, WRC, 10 p. m. She is costarred with June Meredith and Don Ameche.

We hear that Lennie Hayton is signed for a new Lucky Strike program on N. B. C. starting April 20. So far, he's the only feature decided upon.

Why doesn't someone dramatize more O. Henry stories? One radio listener says the only story she heard was swell. Might make a good series for one of the networks.

A new series of garden talks starts today, WMAL, 2:30 p. m., when Mrs. George Shippen, of the Georgetown Garden Club, tells you of present needs of your gaden. This series is under the auspices of the better housing program.

The lighter touch:

Beatrice Lillie starts a dramatic series, "Bea-sop's Fables," in which she indicates that the Greeks didn't have the only words for it. Incidentally, Polly Hunnicutt, locally heard on the Rubbernecks' program got about the same idea a few weeks ago, and had to drop it because of this new series. Did someone say something about great minds?

Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell and William Gargan appear in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

Stoopnagle and Budd refuse to go on the air tonight, but agree they should appear at the studio to ease the feelings of other participants. No telling what will happen. WJSV, 10:30 p. m.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Forget-You-Nots!

Greatest camera-eye in the world, detectives tell me, is that of Capt. William Raftis, of the Pickpocket Squad of the New York Police Department . . . They say that he has the most amazing memory for faces in all the world, and when detectives tell you about him, they actually get an awed look on their faces . . . There was that occasion when one of the Pickpocket Squad went to Newark to pick up three "cannons," police slang for pickpockets . . . Over the phone, he reported to Capt. Raftis . . . "Describe 'em," said Raftis . . . As the detective rattled off the first description, Raftis identified him, and he identified the second . . . "Tell that third guy to hold up his right hand for you," said Raftis over the 'phone. "You'll find, I think, that he has only two fingers on his right hand" . . . From a telephone description, Capt. Raftis had recognized three "cannons" or "guns" who operated together . . . Pickpockets, they tell me, fear him like the kiss of death . . . The minute they are brought to headquarters, and know that they must face Capt. Raftis, they start squirming, because he not only will call them by name, but most probably will tell them when they were arrested last and what magistrate was on the bench when they were arraigned . . . He has a card index memory, perhaps the greatest in the world.

* * * *

There is another person in New York with a somewhat different gift of memory . . . That is Jack Coffey, graduate manager at Fordham University . . . He has trained his memory to correlate names with birthday dates . . . For instance, I called him a little while ago . . . "This is Ed Sullivan, Jack," I told him . . . "The September 28 Ed Sullivan or the June 16 Ed Sullivan?" he asked immediately . . . I told him it was the September 28 entry . . . Coffey, for years, has employed this startling memory for birthday dates to astonish his friends . . . The minute they call him, or meet him, he calls off their birthdays . . . He tells me that he has several thousand birthday dates which he can call off, and I believe him . . . Capt. Raftis, of the pickpocket squad, should add Coffey to his roster . . . It would add a nice sentimental touch at headquarters when the "cannons" arrive, if Coffey were to call off their birthday dates, with perhaps the Police Glee Club drawn up in the background to warble, "Happy birthday to you muggs—happy birthday to youse."

* * * *

Sopie Tucker, of the professionals, has the grandest memory for names and faces . . . I've seen her at a party, where there were 30 or 40 people, call each of them by name when it came time for them to leave . . . Jack Dempsey, when you consider the hundreds of thousands of people he's met, has a magnificent gift of memory, as I proved to the startled Lou Davis one day at Saratoga . . . Newspaper men, of course, have to develop card index systems of their own . . . But I'm always afraid of the fellow who hails you some place and says: "I'll bet you don't remember me" . . . Nine out of ten times he's right, and it is very embarrassing . . . Don't ever do-o-o that!

* * * *

Dawn Patrol Notes: Jimmy Durante has proved a shot in the arm to Casino de Paree, jamming 'em in—but tightly . . . Add Nice Combinations: County Judge Lester Patterson and his pretty frau, perpetual honeymooners . . . Versailles, on East Fiftieth street, clicked from the day it opened, proving that if you give people what they want, it's a sure thing . . . I'd give $100 right this minute to hear Harry Ritz give his impression of an insane person giving his impression of Harry Richman, but the minute is up right now! . . . Jay C. Flippen is doing a grand job as WHN amateur hour tycoon . . . I sang for him last night, that is until they rang the bell, and a minute later the telephone rang. "This is Victor Moore," said the caller, "I just heard Sullivan sing and I want to cast one and one-half votes, one for the gong and one half for him" . . . Spite work, that's all . . . Hottest thing in town will be Ben Finney's Antibes Ball at the Ambassador, April 4 (if you're not going, Toots, you simpuhly don't belong) . . . Sheila Barrett stays in "Thumbs Up" . . . Eddie Davis is back from the South Seas . . . If you can sandwich your way in, I'll see you at Arnold Reuben's opening tonight.

Mourning.

. . . here we had paused, to watch the dawn—
where crystalled dew clung to your hair;
where nettles stung your sandaled feet, and laid your starling whiteness bare . . .

. . . recall you now the barren knoll whereon we viewed Ra's burnished hush?
and how you, frightened, grasped my arm,
as something scurried through th brush? . . .

We stood where none had stood before, and knew what we—shall know no more . . .

—Edward Currie.
